"I'm Satisfied," Says Plunkett Over Loss Of Office By City

Ottawa Member in Defiant Mood When Before Committee of Chamber of Commerce

OTHER DOMINION OFFICES MAY GO

Island Is to Be Given as Little as Possible and Vancouver to Benefit; Not a Schoolboy to Be Lectured, Chairman Tells Plunkett

"I have no apologies to make for the government for what it has done in this regard," stated D. B. Plunkett, M.P., for Victoria, when he appeared before a committee of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce yesterday afternoon to discuss the moving of the head office of the Dominion Department of Public Works from Victoria to Vancouver. R. H. B. Ker was the chairman. Mr. Plunkett was in a defiant mood.

Mr. Ker explained to Mr. Plunkett that the committee was meeting him in accordance with a wish expressed by the directors of the chamber, who wanted to be convinced that economy was the motive for the change, and that there was no case of Vancouver stealing something from Victoria. He pointed out that in the future, when officials of the provincial Department of Public Works wished to confer with the federal officials they would have to travel to Vancouver and that rented office space would have to be provided in Vancouver, whereas in Victoria the offices were in a federal government building, and rent free.

Mr. Plunkett read from orders-in-council, demanding savings in expenditures throughout the federal Civil Service, which would total $14,000,000. He said the reorganization in British Columbia of the federal works department would save the government $34,000.

Fourteen persons will be employed in the new head office of the department in Vancouver, Mr. Plunkett said. Their salaries will total $32,000 a year, he stated. There will be the chief engineer, nine assistants and four in the office staff. The savings were being effected by superannuations and reduction in staff. "This government is trying to economize," Mr. Plunkett stated.

Members of the committee, which included Frank Timmis, G. H. Stephens, Harold Husband, George I. Warren and Mr. Ker, were of the opinion the saving of travelling expenses for officials, between here and Vancouver, would be offset by the rent of offices in Vancouver, which Mr. Plunkett said would be about $250 a month. The member explained that the head office of the engineer had only been in Victoria since 1913, when the Ogden Point breakwater was started.

"TRUE VICTORIANS"

When members of the committee said they were unable to see how the government was going to save money by changing the head office from Victoria to Vancouver, Mr. Plunkett replied, heatedly: "Then you are true Victorians—as I hope I am."

Later, when a committee member said he could not see where any economy would be effected by the change, Mr. Plunkett replied: "You are very clever."

AGAIN AFTER SHORE RIGHTS

Public Bodies Support Imperial Oil Application to Build Harbor Pier

Company Prepared to Spend $25,000 on Project; Federal Charge Excessive

Efforts to again impress upon the Dominion government the need for granting foreshore rights to the Imperial Oil Company for a service pier for yachts and smaller craft in the Inner Harbor are being made in the city, it was learned this morning. Refusal of the government to grant the rights has aroused considerable criticism from public bodies, which are considering uniting in bringing the matter before the Dominion authorities.

Application for the rights first went before the federal authorities about April of this year, when the company stated it had appropriated $25,000 for the construction of the pier and was prepared to proceed immediately with the work, providing the rights could be granted for a nominal amount.

SECRETARY CARROLL

The government, however, demanded $1,000 a year for the 200-foot pier required, and refused to lower this figure when the company declined to pay this amount, but announced it would consider a lower figure.

The granting of the rights would mean considerable business for this city, as by far the larger portion of the money would be spent on labor.

At the time the application was sent through, the City Council strongly supported it, and telegrams were sent to the government urgently requesting favorable consideration.

D. B. Plunkett, M.P. for Victoria, admitted this morning that he had done little in the matter after the application had been refused, and had not taken it up since that date.

WOULD BEAUTIFY HARBOR

The construction of the pier would also serve to beautify the harbor as has done the company's Causeway service station, besides supplying a much-needed service for craft plying in and out of Victoria.

An official of the Imperial Oil Company stated this morning that his firm was still prepared to go ahead with the project, but not on the basis of paying the excessive charge of $1,000 a year for foreshore rights. In view of the service which the company would render in beautifying the harbor, it was felt that such an amount was far too great.

MOLLISONS IN CANADA FOR DISTANCE FLIGHT

U.S. Proposes To Proceed Without Restriction On Its $238,000,000 Programme

Great Britain Takes View That Large American Naval Building Plans Will Create Bad Impression on Eve of Disarmament Conference

NATIONS MAY BE FORCED TO ENTER

Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 20. — President Roosevelt intends to go ahead without restriction on the $238,000,000 programme to build the United States navy up to treaty limits.

Reports have been current from abroad that suggestions had been made to Norman H. Davis, United States ambassador at Large, that there be some abandonment or curtailment of the building programme.

It was asserted at the White House no such suggestion actually had been received by the President himself, even though some such word might have been delivered to other sources.

The President let it be known contracts have been let for the programme, and under no circumstances was there any thought of going back over these contracts or altering plans.

It appears any suggestion that may have been made to the United States by Great Britain would concern the four class "B" cruisers called for by the programme, which would lay down tonnages up to the last pound of the 10,000-ton limit, with six-inch guns.

Those familiar with British naval contentions in past conferences understand Britain desires a smaller maximum on the class "B" type, and feels should these ships be constructed there would be little possibility of eliminating this larger type of vessel at the 1935 naval conference.

BRITISH VIEW

London, Sept. 20.—The government told United States Ambassador-at-Large Norman H. Davis on his recent visit here the American naval building programme might make a bad impression on other countries on the eve of the disarmament conference.

This authoritative explanation was advanced to-day for reports from Washington that Britain had requested the United States to defer its construction schedule.

It was understood Mr. Davis was informed that Britain was not herself worried about American construction, but feared others might be.

This was qualified by a statement there might be apprehension in England if a naval race developed between Japan and America, in which case Britain might be forced to enter the competition.

Disputable problems regarding security, supervision of armaments and control, are understood to have been raised in the Anglo-French conversations in Paris this week, and it is the task of the British government to try to reconcile divergencies of opinion.

FINDS DRUG IN POPPIES

Analyst Describes How Flower Seed Capsules Produce Morphine

Hindu Drug Case Goes Ahead Before Magistrate George Jay

H. O. Tomlinson, Dominion analyst at Vancouver, found .8 grains of morphine an ounce in poppy heads seized by R.C.M.P. officers from Beru, a Hindu, he testified when the trial of Beru on a charge of having a drug in his possession opened before Magistrate George Jay in the City Police Court this morning.

Stuart Henderson, defence counsel, entered a plea of "not guilty" and the case went ahead as a summary prosecution with R. A. Wootton acting for the crown. The prosecution evidence was completed by lunch time, when an adjournment was taken until to-morrow morning.

Some three hundred pounds of poppy heads were stacked in the courtroom as the material evidence in the case.

Mr. Tomlinson described how the poppy heads were used by natives in India and in some parts of Europe. The actual seeds contain no drug content, he explained, the morphine coming from the capsules in which they are contained. The practice, he said, was to take the seeds and mix them with sugar as a confection for children. The adults then took the capsules and stewed them in hot water to make a tea, by which method about fifty or sixty per cent. of the morphine was obtainable.

QUANTITY OF MORPHINE

The witness said he had taken three ounces of the material for the analysis and found it to contain one in 600 parts of morphine.

Under examination by Mr. Wootton he stated that druggists were allowed preparations containing one-quarter of a grain of the drug and the poppies contained more than three times this amount.

World Famous Theosophist Passes in India in Eighty-sixth Year

End Comes to Woman Who Preached Coming of Second Messiah

Canadian Press

Madras, India, Sept. 20.—Dr. Annie Besant, known throughout the world for her leadership in the theosophical activities, died to-day. On October 1 she would have been eighty-six years old.

The peacefulness of her last few days was in vivid contrast to the storm of her life. She was in a state of half-consciousness for sometime, never speaking at length even to her most intimate friends. Dr. Besant had no malady except old age. She was mentally and physically worn out.

In 1931 she suffered a fall from which she never recovered. On that occasion she was unconscious thirty hours and, according to a theosophist friend, an inner group of the elect sat in a circle about her and restored her to consciousness by concentrated transference of power from themselves to her.

Many theosophists expressed the opinion her last days were marred by a disappointment in Jeddu Krishna-

Finding Puts Reichstag Fire Suspicion On Nazis

TRIAL STARTS IN GERMANY

Associated Press

London, Sept. 20.—An international legal commission which has been holding an inquiry into the Berlin Reichstag fire last February, found to-day grave grounds existed for suspecting the building was set afire by the Nazis rather than by the Communists whom the German government has accused.

The commission, an entirely unofficial body, pointed out that any view or conviction it might express was formed only on the material it had obtained, and that this material was incomplete. The members of the commission agreed that the fire obviously was of incendiary origin.

They concluded that Marinus Van Der Lubbe, young Dutchman, who goes on trial for the fire in Leipzig to-morrow, is not a member of the Communist party but is an opponent of it. No connection whatever could be traced the report said, between the Communist party and the Reichstag arson.

E. W. BEATTY COMING WEST

C.P.R. President at Calgary on Way to Victoria

Canadian Press

Calgary, Sept. 20.—Rumored consideration of a scaling-down of railway rates in the United States is subject to close observation by Canadian railway executives, E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, said here yesterday evening. Mr. Beatty reached here and planned to leave today for Vancouver and Victoria. He was accompanied from Winnipeg by D. C. Coleman, vice-president of western lines. The party also included A. E. Whitmore, Regina, and J. W. Hobbs, Toronto, president of the Consolidated Plate Glass Company.

"The question of lower fares is a matter of development and depends on future traffic," Mr. Beatty stated. "But I believe, judging by the manner in which they have been patronized in the last few months, excursions have come to stay."

Mr. Beatty refused to comment on the possibility of the proposed 10 per cent. reduction in salaries of railway emoplyees being rescinded, contenting himself with the remark that "this is a matter for the representatives of the men to decide for themselves."

Eastern Canada's notable improvement in general conditions is, without question, fundamental "because we do not experiment," Mr. Beatty stated. With regard to western Canada, he expressed the opinion crop returns are better than had been anticipated by the experts. The lightness of the crop, however, explained why the prairie provinces were not sharing in the general turn of conditions in Canada.

Asked if the Canadian Pacific Railway had submitted a brief to the Royal Commission on Banking, Mr. Beatty answered with an emphatic "No!"

GROWING CUBAN DISORDER FEARED

JUDGE PLANS RETIREMENT

Mr. Justice W. A. Macdonald on Supreme Court Bench Twenty Years

Canadian Press

Vernon, Sept. 20. — Mr. Justice W. A. Macdonald, who on September 26 will have completed twenty years on the Supreme Court bench in this province, announced in Assize Court here yesterday that the rumor of his early retirement is not without foundation.

"I have contemplated this step for some time," he remarked. It is over fifty years since I first started to practice law, and I am approaching my seventy-fifth birthday. I believe, therefore, that I deserve a rest."

Mr. Justice Macdonald stated that he had not definitely decided on the date on which he will forward his resignation to the government.

"There are many young men able and quite willing to take my place," he concluded.

Free Gasoline Keeps Homeless Families Moving

Cities Supply Fuel for Transients, Rather Than Keep Them as Relief Wards; Must Stop, Says Hon. W. M. Dennies.

The development of modern times, the automobile transients who have replaced the old-time tramps, are creating a problem for British Columbia, Hon. W. M. Dennies, Minister of Labor, reports.

Families tour now, instead of the lone hobo, Mr. Dennies says. In possession of an automobile but without funds they roam the country and secure their gasoline from municipalities which find it cheaper to provide the fuel to move them on than keep them in town as relief wards.

Many of the joyriders are from Alberta, says Mr. Dennies, who has just returned from a trip to the Okanagan and Kootenay districts in connection with unemployment relief matters.

Mr. Dennies found that families were piling into old cars, driving across the B.C. line, asking for free meals and a supply of gas to move onward. Municipal officials found it cheaper to supply them with gas and keep them moving than to harbor them indefinitely, and the joyful news seemed to spread back to the prairie province, resulting in a regular parade of cars.

How many Alberta cars with their passengers have been touring this province on free gas, with the occasional free meal and lodging, is unknown, but the southern interior had been their happy hunting ground until Mr. Dennies investigated and issued orders that no more free gas would be supplied to prairie itinerants.

Many people not entitled to relief will be off the list immediately, according to Mr. Dennies, who found much room for improvement in unorganized districts.

The situation at Fernie was most deplorable, Mr. Dennies stated. He visited the schools and saw at first hand ill-clad children, many of whom wore shoes that should have been discarded long ago. Shoes and clothing will be furnished them immediately, Mr. Dennies stated. Arrangements also were virtually completed to supply the unemployed there with coal during the winter when the mercury touches 40 below.

"Work And Wages" Is Goal Of Liberals

Liberal Leader Addresses Audience of 800 in Own Constituency Last Night

Prince Rupert, Sept. 20.—"Let our opponents call it a machine if they will, but I can tell you that the Liberal Party has a better organization to-day than ever in its history and we are ready to take over the affairs of this province to-day and enact without delay measures for the benefit of the people as a whole in accordance with Liberal ideals," T. D. Pattullo, B.C. Liberal leader, told an audience of 800 persons here yesterday evening.

The meeting, held at Moose Hall, was one of the largest public meetings ever held in Prince Rupert.

"If you put into office inexperienced men," said Mr. Pattullo, "it will be two years before they will know what to do and the country will continue to suffer during the immediate future when it is so essential that action should be taken. If I am given the

NO MELTING IS WARNING

Heavy Penalties For Those Who Change Gold Coin Into Bullion

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—A warning to those who might be tempted to melt down gold coin in order to secure the high price now prevailing for the raw metal, is contained in a statement issued by the Department of Finance yesterday. Heavy penalties await those who might be tempted to take advantage of the market in that manner.

Section 25 of the Currency Act provides the penalty for illegally dealing with such gold coin shall be a fine not exceeding $250, or to imprisonment for not more than twelve months, or both fine and imprisonment.

Although no official announcement was made of the engagement, it became generally known throughout this Moslem city, and a celebration was held Monday evening at the palace.

Unemployment is British Columbia's main problem, Mr. Pattullo pointed out and the Liberal party is ready to take over the affairs of the province at once and enact without delay measures for the benefit of the people as a whole in accordance with Liberal ideals.

As the Liberal leader tours the north he is issuing a warning against putting into office inexperienced men who would require two years before they knew what to do.

Perils Seen Facing U.S. Farm Recovery

Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 20.—United States Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace to-day told the United States Grain Dealers' Association he still favors controlled inflation.

Along with this he criticized high tariff psychology and warned attempts to fix prices "without control of production is doomed to failure."

"Most of the price fixers are also inflationists," he said. "If the purchasing power of farm products does not improve during the next three months, the price fixers and inflationists will have great power in Congress this coming winter and there will be passed legislation which will make the Agricultural Adjustment Act seem extraordinarily conservative."

FORCES OF PERIL

Secretary Wallace said he looked for decidedly higher agricultural prices within a few months, but he felt the improvement might come to a sad end if "we are not prepared to meet the peril produced by the following forces:

"First, the United States is a creditor nation to the tune of $1,000,000,000 annually, but as a nation, she has a debtor psychology.

"Second, the American people are still essentially high tariff in their attitude. Reciprocal tariff agreements may be negotiated, but the increase in foreign purchasing power resulting thereby will not be sufficient to enable foreign countries to pay a satisfactory price for our surplus wheat and cotton unless the attitude of the American people and American congressmen change very radically.

"Third, the American people are disillusioned about lending money abroad, and it will be difficult to float foreign loans in the present temper.

"These three forces mean that for the time being our people are profoundly nationalistic, and that as long as they are operating on this basis, we should go at it wholeheartedly to put our internal economy on a nationalistic basis, reducing our crop land acreage by 40,000,000 acres.

WARNING ISSUED

"If we persist in our high tariff policy, or even in a half-way modification of it and at the same time collect in full the money which is owed us abroad, and refuse to lend money abroad, it will take superhuman efforts on the part of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration year after year to keep down our acreage to a point which will afford a living price to American farmers."

"I'm Satisfied," Says Plunkett Over Loss Of Office By City

NOT PAYING

Mr. Plunkett said the bulk of the public works in the province were now conducted on the mainland and the interior points were more accessible from Vancouver than from Victoria. Members of the committee pointed out that public works along the West Coast of Vancouver Island were nearer to Victoria, and that some of the largest public works in the province, chiefly the Ogden Point breakwater and the drydock at Esquimalt, were at Victoria.

Do you think for one moment that drydock is paying?" asked Mr. Plunkett. "Would you have the chief engineer stationed at Victoria merely to keep up repairs to the drydock?"

Mr. Plunkett said it was too late for anyone to do anything about the removal of this department, but expressed the opinion the Chamber of Commerce should write the government, protesting against the move of any other federal department from Victoria.

OTHERS TO GO

may be moved, and we will have to fight," he said. He thought the Department of Indian Affairs and the Department of Marine and Fisheries might be moved.

"I have no fear regarding the removal of the Naval Department," he stated.

Mr. Plunkett thanked the committee for the opportunity it gave him to contradict an editorial and certain letters in the "Liberal press" of this city, which stated that no economies were being effected by the change.

Mr. Husband asked: "Mr. Plunkett, are you in favor of moving the offices from Victoria to Vancouver?"

Mr. Plunkett replied:

"Yes, I am. I regret the loss to Victoria, but because it is in the interests of economy and efficiency, I am satisfied."

REFUSED TO TALK

Mr. Plunkett refused to talk with members of the committee until representatives of both Victoria papers were present. He kept the committee waiting for fifteen minutes. He said he wished the press there so he could brand as "deliberate lies" and "foolish propaganda" the statement contained in The Times editorials as well as in letters.

"Aldermen are supposed to be responsible persons," he stated, in referring to letters in the press from one alderman.

At times the meeting became heated, and the chairman, Mr. Ker, found it necessary to remind Mr. Plunkett that he had not gone there "to be lectured like a schoolboy by him."

"I understood, Mr. Plunkett, you politicians made friends whenever possible," one member of the committee remarked. "We came here to-day to talk this thing over with you, and see if we could help you, and you treat us as antagonists."

Mr. Warren pointed out that the removal of the office took six families, totaling sixteen persons, from Victoria.

ISLAND AT DISADVANTAGE

When committee men pointed out that Vancouver had Hon. H. H. Stevens as one of its citizens, and so had an advantage over Victoria at Ottawa, Mr. Plunkett said it was very difficult for him at the seat of government, when Vancouver Island had only three members and the rest of the province eleven.

"They want to give the island as little as possible," he said, "and the way is not rosy or peaceful. They point out to me that the population of the mainland is increasing all the time, and the population on the island is not. What can I say in the face of that argument?" he asked.

Mr. Ker assured Mr. Plunkett that the Chamber of Commerce was only too anxious and willing to help him in any matters possible, although, of course, it was difficult to protest when economic reasons were given for any change. The meeting adjourned with the members of the committee of the opinion the government "could have achieved economy and still maintained the head offices of the department in Victoria."

WORK AND WAGES GOAL OF LIBERALS

majority that Premier Tolmie enjoyed in the last Legislature, and I am confident that such a majority is going to be given us on November 2, do you think I will hesitate in putting our policies into effect?" he asked.

OPPOSED TO DOLE METHOD

Mr. Pattullo expressed unqualified and complete opposition to the present method of the dole and declared that for it should be substituted the Liberal policy of "work and wages" on a national programme of public works. For such work, Mr. Pattullo prophesied, the federal government would soon be lending to the provinces without interest.

"Where precedent has been found to be good," Mr. Pattullo declared, "we will maintain it. Where it has been found to be bad, we will scrap it, and, where necessary, we will make it."

TO HELP MUNICIPALITIES

Mr. Pattullo reviewed the Liberal platform in regard to financing, promising the abolition of "nuisance taxes" and efforts to reduce interest charges. Provincial and municipal finances would be overhauled so as to make it possible for the municipalities to look after their people and survive.

The Liberal Party stood for the encouragement of market expansion and the leader promised that it would be his endeavor to co-operate with the federal and other provincial governments, regardless of their political color, with a view to developing markets and in other matters.

The meeting was presided over by G. W. Nickerson.

Major S. F. M. Moodie of Victoria, Liberal organizer for the province, and Olaf Hanson, M.P. for Skeena, were heard briefly.

U.S. Proposes to Proceed With $238,000,000 Programme

Meanwhile reports from Paris were Mr. Davis is awaiting an Anglo-French agreement as a guide for his future activities. It is said unofficially France and England already have agreed on such general lines there is to be substantial disarmament but it will not be effective until a trial period of control has shown that disarmament is feasible.

PRESS FOR REDUCTION

By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 20.—The British government is determined to press ahead for reduction of world armaments. The situation was fully reviewed at a special meeting of the cabinet this afternoon, but examination of apparent difficulties, the Canadian Press was authoritatively informed, only left the ministers more than ever convinced they must use their uttermost efforts to secure the conclusion of a disarmament pact.

Paris, Sept. 20.—French and Italian positions on disarmament problems were said in diplomatic circles to-day to have been brought closer together as a result of exchanges between Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour and the Italian ambassador.

It was understood a plan, attributed to Italy, for granting Germany the right to keep sample models of arms was no longer involved.

SESSION MAY BE IN JANUARY

Legislation to Include Revision of Bank Act and Waterways Ratification

Canadian Press

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—January 11 is mentioned as a possible date for the opening of the next session of Parliament among opponents of a fall sitting.

Revision of the Bank Act, based on the report to be made by the Macmillan Royal Commission, and ratification of the St. Lawrence Waterways Treaty, may constitute the major legislation to be brought down by the government.

The introduction of a measure embodying changes in the Bank Act shortly after parliament meets is viewed as a certainty. Approval of the Canada-United States pact for development of the St. Lawrence will be asked, it is stated, only after concurrence of Congress at Washington.

Advices from Washington, unofficially, report the probability of the St. Lawrence Waterways Treaty being approved by the United States in January. In this eventuality, the pact will come before parliament early in the session for sanction.

In the cross-examination, details were elicited as to the drug contents of other products and the way in which natives obtained them.

Mr. Henderson asked witness if it was not a fact that wheat contained alcohol.

"Mostly starch," witness replied.

"But alcohol can be obtained from wheat?" asked counsel.

"Yes, but by a complicated process," he replied.

Morphine, he explained, could not be made in Mexico, though it is used as a base for other drugs.

Mr. Henderson asked if it was not possible to buy poppy heads in stores, and he said this was quite possible.

METHOD OF SECURING

Mr. Wootton questioned the witness regarding the method of securing morphine from the capsules.

"You could shew the poppy heads and get it that way, or else by making a tea with hot water," he said. "That, I understand, is the usual manner of preparing morphine for medicinal purposes."

Corpl. M. T. Berger, Constable R. Clearweather, Constable Betts, Constable G. Heywood and Corpl. George Horne also testified, describing the seizure of the poppy heads.

Corpl. Berger described the flowers as a "dirty white" in color and not the type used for ornamental purposes.

Before opening the defence, Mr. Henderson made a motion for dismissal.

"The Drug Act," he said, "define certain drugs in the schedule, and in all cases the actual morphine or other drug has been before the court. Moreover the act deals with the manufactured drug, and there is no word in the act dealing with the growing of the natural product. If it had been intended to affect the man growing poppies, surely this would have been mentioned in the act. Poppies are used for many purposes, often as an ornamental plant. I think this is an attempt to stretch the act to an intention that the framers of the law did not contemplate."

Mr. Wootton said Parliament had passed an all-embracing statute to prohibit the use and possession of drugs, no matter whether they were produced artificially or naturally. The particular type of poppy in the case was not the ornamental variety, but was used for the specific purpose of deriving morphine. The only defence which the accused could offer was to show, if possible, that he had the drug lawfully, either on a license from the minister, or by prescription of a medical man or druggist, he said.

At this stage the remand until tomorrow was taken.

MORE STATES FOR REPEAL

Albuquerque, N.M., Sept. 20.—New Mexico had joined the United States prohibition repeal parade to-day by virture of a three to one majority cast for elimination of the dry law in yesterday's special election. The state also voted to abolish the fifteen-year-old state bone dry statute.

Only two of New Mexico's twenty-seven counties voted against repeal. Returns had been compiled from 257 of the state's 785 precincts. The unreported precincts, however, represented only 20 per cent of the estimated vote. The count stood: For repeal 31,166, against repeal 9,842.

IN IDAHO

Associated Press

Boise, Idaho, Sept. 20.—By a vote of approximately 5 to 4, Idaho to-day had ranged herself alongside the twenty-nine other states that had previously declared for repeal of the 18th amendment.

Returns in yesterday's election from 568 of the state's 819 precincts, in forty-three of the forty-four counties, gave a total of 50,642 for repeal and 37,743 against.

ESCAPES WHEN AUTO CRASHES

Nanaimo, Sept. 20.—Robert Frew of Wellington suffered facial bruises and a shaking-up when his car overturned after skidding in the gravel at Lantzville yesterday evening, while he was returning home from work. Both front wheels were broken off and the top of the car damaged. Mrs. Frew was taken home by fellow workmen.

Value of Fine Ounce Jumps Two Shillings at London to New All-time High of $32.96 in Canadian Funds

Canadian Press and Associated Press

Montreal, Sept. 20.—The price of bar gold in London to-day was $32.96 an ounce in terms of the Canadian dollar, based on the London price of 133s 9d, and the quotation of sterling in Montreal at $4.92¾. Yesterday the Canadian equivalent was $32.08.

London, Sept. 20.—A sensational rise of two shillings in the price of gold to-day brought it to the highest figure ever known, 133 shillings ninepence a fine ounce.

INFLATION CONFERENCE

Washington, Sept. 20. — President Roosevelt sent word to-day he would be glad to receive the southern delegation urging United States currency inflation, but meanwhile he maintained his strict silence as to his views on the subjects.

He went to his study in the executive mansion for the first time since his recent cold.

He had a group of callers who had been waiting since Monday, and will be unable to see the delegation of inflationists before to-morrow.

A letter, signed by several score delegates late yesterday evening, said the situation in the cotton growing states "is desperate" and asked for "immediate effective action to raise the level of the price of cotton and other farm products" through inflation.

FARM PROGRAMME

Washington, Sept. 20.—A call for a nation-wide conference of United States agricultural leaders in event the administration fails to act promptly toward increasing farm prices by currency inflation has been authorized by a delegation from nine cotton states here to urge adoption of some programme to help the farmer quickly.

A letter to President Roosevelt urging him to consider resolutions calling for inflation, removal of the cotton processing tax and minimum prices of twenty cents a pound for cotton and $30 a ton for cotton seed also was approved by the delegates.

CAR RUNS AMOK ON NANAIMO ST.

Nanaimo, Sept. 20.—A car belonging to R. Snyder, Vancouver, parked outside a store on Fitzwilliam Street yesterday evening suddenly began to move and traveled at a rate of fifteen miles an hour across the intersection of Wallace and Bastion Streets, and safely navigated Bastion Bridge after carrying away fifteen feet of the handrail. It proceeded on its way and crashed into a Chevrolet coach standing beside the City Hall. A young lady in the latter car suffered a shaking up and several bruises. Had the collision occurred one minute later there might have been several persons injured, as a crowd was just emerging from the Capitol Theatre. The car traveled 500 yards on its down hill trip.

SLATE NAMED BY TRUSTEES

J. P. Carr, Matsqui, Elected President of B.C. Association at Courtenay

Question of Recommendations From High School to University Is Discussed

Courtenay, B.C., Sept. 20.—J. P. Carr, Matsqui, was unanimously elected president of the British Columbia School Trustees Association for the ensuing year. Other officers elected for the year included: Mrs. E. C. Mahon, Vancouver, first vice-president; D. Chapman, Kelowna, second vice-president, and E. Bush, Mission City, E. J. Cronk, Port Alberni; A. G. Perry, North Vancouver, and A. Barbaree, New Westminster, executive. George A. Grant, Vancouver, was re-elected secretary-treasurer of the association.

A report was submitted by the resolutions committee that the whole question of dismissing teachers should be left in the hands of the incoming executive for action at the next annual convention.

Mrs. Paul Smith, chairman of the resolutions committee, offered a resolution endorsing the principle of accredited high schools. H. Charlesworth, of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, said the proposal would extend promotion by recommendation to university. He pointed out pupils would pass many examinations during their course, and he believed recommendation was fair to all students. It would aid, too, in reducing expenses. Mr. Charlesworth added he believed the University of British Columbia was now ready to appoint a representative to go into the question and he thought some action might be expected in the next year.

Mrs. E. C. Mahon, Vancouver, quoted a number of English and Canadian educationists in support of the proposal.

HINCHLIFFE SPEAKS

Hon. J. Hinchliffe, Minister of Education, congratulated the association on taking up this question. He stressed his view some method must be devised in British Columbia to make sure that only suitable students are permitted to enter university. He thought it was tragic students should be allowed to go along until their twenty-first or twenty-second year before discovering they were not fitted for academic careers.

The resolution was adopted. A committee, composed of Mrs. M. C. Christie, Royston; Mrs. E. M. Dennis, Fraser Valley; J. Blackwood, Vancouver, and R. S. Wilton, Vernon, was named to co-ordinate work among the various branches during the coming year.

The incoming executive was empowered to deal with the question of preparing a brief on school taxation for submission to the royal commission.

The association adjourned at 11.15 o'clock this morning.

BALCHEN IS IN HOSPITAL

Associated Press

Capetown, Union of South Africa, Sept. 20.—Bernt Balchen, noted aviator who disappeared yesterday when supposed to report for an appendicitis operation, finally showed up this noon at the Volks Hospital. Physicians said his condition made an operation necessary this afternoon.

During the period of his absence Balchen got in touch by telephone several times with Sir Hubert Wilkins, his fellow explorer, and other associates. He and Sir Hubert are en route to the Antarctic with the Lincoln Ellsworth expedition.

The doctor with whom Balchen consulted after leaving the ship yesterday said he received a telephone call in which Balchen said he would be ready for the operation at any time. Sir Hubert said he was not worried.

The flier left the ship on which he arrived with Sir Hubert for the Lincoln Ellsworth expedition to the Bay of Whales, and started for the hospital in a taxi.

He met a doctor in a hotel room. They talked for a while and then Balchen excused himself, not to reappear.

Balchen, thirty-five, was Admiral Richard E. Byrd's pilot across the Atlantic in 1927 and to the South Pole, and was a member of the Amundsen North Pole expedition in 1926.

DEATH CALLS ANNIE BESANT

murti, Hindu in whom Dr. Besant said at one time the "reincarnation of Christ" would be manifest. Krishnamurti repudiated her.

Evolution from wifehood and motherhood in a quiet English vicarage to world-wide leadership of the Theosophical Society, interspersed with pioneering in British socialism and with work for home rule in India, marked the long life of Dr. Annie Besant.

As president of the Theosophical Society, to which post she was elected in 1907, 1914, 1922 and 1928, she lectured and organized branches of the creed in many parts of the world. There was eleven such "sections," or national societies, when she first became president. By 1932 there were forty-seven.

Nearly all the countries of Europe, the United States, Canada, Australia and New Zealand were visited by her in this work. On these tours she expounded theosophy as "a mystical speculation applied to deduce a philosophy of the universe." She preached the doctrine of reincarnation and that man could know God by developing his own soul.

Mrs. Besant was born in London, October 1, 1847. Her father, William Page Wood, was an Englishman, half Irish. Her mother was Irish, and she always referred to herself as Irish. When twenty, Annie Wood married Rev. Frank Besant, who later became vicar of Sibsey, in Lincolnshire.

She embraced theosophy in 1889 after W. T. Stead, editor of The Review of Reviews, asked her to review "Secret Doctrine," by Mme. Helena Petrovna Blavatsky, one of the founders of the cult. An interview between reviewer and author resulted in conversion of the former. Mrs. Besant broke with her socialist friends and in 1893 took up her residence in India at Adyar, Madras.

INDIA POLITICAL WORK

Her active political work, in which she advocated dominion status for India within the British Empire, began in 1913. She was credited in 1915 with having re-united two faction into which the India National Congress had split. Her continued activity through the years of the world war resulted in her being barred in 1916 from the Central Provinces and from the province of Bombay. The following year the Madras provincial government interned her in a small hill settlement.

The sentence lasted only three months and upon her release she was elected president of the India National Congress. Her eminence in the movement lasted until 1920.

She lost her place in India's struggle when she disagreed with Mahatma Gandhi's programme. Mrs. Besant said she believed in "passive resistance" but she would not countenance "the breaking of a law not selected by the individual, but thrust upon him at the dictation of someone else's policy."

Political Paragraphs

in the history of politics. Following his statement that he will not run as a government candidate, Mr. Jones's resignation is still being called for throughout the province.

The Vancouver Daily Province yesterday carried an editorial in which it claimed the resignation of Mr. Jones should be handed in. "Mr. Jones is a member of the Tolmie Government who does not endorse the policies of the government, yet he does not resign," it says. "If he remains he is creating a precedent, and precedents alter constitutions."

"Mr. Jones's position puts other members of the cabinet in an anomalous position," the editorial says. "If they work with Mr. Jones, who is not in sympathy with them, and contest seats as members of the Tolmie government, they violate the principle of cabinet solidarity."

In the meantime Premier Tolmie declares everything is fine. He classed a cabinet meeting held yesterday as one of the most harmonious on record. Which recalls his claims a few weeks before the Legislature closed and the disintegration started in that all the Conservative members had their heads up and tails up and were all in the same happy family.

Premier Tolmie also anounced yesterday he was not contemplating making any more changes in the cabinet.

The Prince Rupert News wants to know "if Premier Tolmie will have the courage to take Mr. Jones by the back of the neck and let him feel the weight of a farmer's boot, or will he tamely submit to have an open enemy in his cabinet?"

Independent headquarters in Vancouver is expected to announce dates for the selection of its candidates in that city shortly. W. J. Bowser has announced his intention of running in Vancouver Centre, and Hon. William Savage has staked out Point Grey as his riding as a Unionist. Of the Conservative members of the late House running again, G. A. Walkem is expected to contest Point Grey, Col. Nelson Spencer, Burrard, and T. H. Kirk, probably the centre.

The C.C.F. has announced its slate of candidates for all but one Vancouver seat, as follows: Point Grey, F. E. Buck; Mrs. R. P. Steeves, W. A. Pritchard (substituted for R. H. Neelands, who has been withdrawn); Burrard, Miss S. Osterhout and J. Sideaway; Vancouver Centre, W. W. Lefeaux; Vancouver East, J. Price and W. Winch.

"If the C.C.F. will draw up a programme that deals with provincial matters they will interest us. Until then they merely depict a vision of a glorious future that most of us only hope to attain in a better land," says Ben Hughes of Courtenay, commenting on the fact that the Legislature at Victoria has not the power to deal with such questions as the C.C.F. lists in its platform.

George S. Pearson, Nanaimo-Alberni candidate, is pointing out in meetings he is holding in his constituency that the C.C.F. is not a provincial movement and its policies have no application upon the pending provincial election.

"Even if the C.C.F. were to capture the whole forty-seven seats available in the provincial House they would be impotent to enact any of the reforms its speakers present. The Legislature at Victoria simply has not the power to deal with such questions," Mr. Hughes emphasizes. "It is manifestly unfair to use the provincial election as a trial of strength for a future Dominion contest. Is British Columbia to be made the victim of an experiment in the vague hope that the rest of Canada will follow two years later?"

Opposition from quarters to which they looked for support continues to be offered to the C.C.F. The United Front besides cross-examining speakers is running candidates against the C.C.F. and inviting C.C.F. supporters to jump to its ranks. The Socialist Party of Canada in Vancouver has organized for war against the C.C.F. The Independent C.C.F. is opposing C.C.F. candidates.

Announcement was made in Vancouver yesterday by the socialist Party of Canada that it will contest four of the Greater Vancouver constituencies. Candidates named are: J. H. Burrough, Vancouver East; Sidney Earp, Vancouver Centre; William Black, Burrard, and James King, Burnaby.

M. H. Coombe has been named campaign manager for the Socialists on the mainland. G. Sangster is chairman of the party.

A statement has been issued by Vancouver Local No. 1 of the Socialist Party of Canada explaining its position as opposed to that of the C.C.F.

The C.C.F. is listing support of women in the campaign. District groups are being formed. On the mainland there are two women C.C.F. candidates, Mrs. R. P. Steeves in Point Grey and Miss M. Osterhout in Burrard.

First big down-town meeting in Vancouver of the provincial election campaign will be held in the Auditorium on Tuesday, September 26, by the Liberals. Mr. Pattullo, now touring the northern constituencies, will be the chief speaker. He has been requested to outline the course of action to be followed by the government to be formed by him after the election.

In Vancouver East, F. G. Willey has announced he will be an Independent candidate.

First desertion from the group of original Bowser party nominees has been made. J. A. MacLeod, who was nominated in May as a Non-partizan candidate for Chilliwack, under the leadership of W. J. Bowser, has withdrawn from the election contest. Mr. MacLeod's decision was made following the announcement by Mr. Bowser that he had joined the Independents. A convention will be held at Abbotsford on September 27 to nominate an Independent candidate.

Another candidate, making the fifth in the Alberni-Nanaimo district, for legislative honors in the election to be held on November 9, is reported in the person of Dr. R. B. Dier.

Dr. Dier, though once a Conservative candidate in the Newcastle district, promises in this contest to be a straight-forward, out-and-out independent. He is a brother of Dr. Harry Dier, at one time resident dentist of Port Alberni and now of Vancouver.

Another instance of conflict between the United Front and the C.C.F. is in Prince Rupert which consistently returns T. D. Pattullo, Liberal Leader, to the Legislature. A C.C.F. and a United Front candidate are in the field and Charles Chapman, the United Front nominee, writes to say he is in to stay.

"In order to set at rest the rumor current that the United Front candidate may withdraw from the election contest in order to clear the way for a Liberal or C.C.F. candidate I wish to state that as the United Front candidate in the Prince Rupert riding I have not the slightest intention of withdrawing and am in the fight to the finish," Mr. Chapman writes.

W. O. Wallace, for many years president of the Saanich Conservative Association, has been named campaign manager for Premier Tolmie. Mr. Wallace is also an official of the Nanaimo federal Conservative Association.

Appointment of returning officers for the province was completed with the nomination of the following five yesterday: North Vancouver, Ernest Noel Copping, North Vancouver; Vancouver-Burrard, George H. Andrews, Vancouver; Vancouver Centre, Francis Drewe Pratt, Vancouver; Vancouver East, Thomas Irvine, Vancouver, and Salmon Arm, Reginald R. Perry, Salmon Arm.

Returning officers throughout the province will name their own election clerks, deputy returning officers and poll clerks. All forms used in connection with preparation for a provincial general election are now in the hands of the various officials, with the printing of the completed voters' lists to come next.

The meeting at Royal Oak, Saanich, Thursday evening, at which Premier Tolmie was to have issued a statement with reference to the political situation, has been indefinitely postponed it was stated at the Premier's office to-day. The inability of Attorney-General Pooley to attend was given as the reason for postponement.

T. W. Falconer, Alice Arm merchant, who was the Conservative candidate for Atlin in the last provincial election, has decided to enter the forthcoming contest as an independent candidate. He makes the fourth candidate in the field, the others being W. J. Asselstine, Liberal; T. J. Shenton, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, and H. W. M. Rolston, Independent.

STRIKES IN U.S. ARE SUBSIDING

Canadian Press

New York, Sept. 20.—Blue Eagle men labored to-day to oil the U.S. industrial machinery made creaky by friction between capital and labor.

Several strikes were subsiding under the ministrations of NRA mediators and others. Troublous conditions still prevailed, however, in some other industrial sectors.

The signing of the coal code prompted United Mine Workers to summon 20,000 striking diggers in district 5, Pennsylvania, to return to the mines.

In Philadelphia where 12,000 truck drivers and helpers are idle because of a truck strike, a food shortage was averted when drivers agreed to handle perishable cargoes tied up since last Saturday. The government opened attempts to arbitrate to-day.

In Detroit, NRA mediators broke a record. In four hours, five minutes they reached a settlement in a strike of 300 employees of the Bowler Rolled Company. The NRA board peacemakers averted a strike of millinery workers in St. Louis and reached an agreement to settle a strike of 600 dress workers there.

The other side of the picture showed:

Arkanas—Coal strike threatened.

Oklahoma—Coal strike threatened.

New York—15,000 painters strike.

Chicago — Cleaners, dyers strike threatened.

Arizona—Pipe line strike threatened.

New York—Underwear strike continues.

BLIND GARDENERS TELL OF PROWESS

Canadian Press

London, Sept. 20.—"Gardening for the Blind" is the title of a booklet issued from the office of the National Institute for the Blind, Great Portland Street, London, which is affiliated with the Guild of Blind Gardeners. Just what a blind persons can do in a garden is told in this booklet by blind men. One of them says: "During the past twelve years of total blindness, I have produced sufficient culinary vegetables to maintain an ample supply of all kinds for domestic use all the year around." But how can weeds be distinguished? Another blind gardener tells us: "The position of a weed is a good guide. The plants in the beds are known, and as they are placed in rows or clumps, it follows that any plant which is out of alignment is, for our purpose, a weed." And here we come to what would appear to be the most difficult of gardening tasks for a blind person—mowing the lawn—though the writer calls it "the most pleasant of weekly jobs."

He admits that "it is not possible in cutting grass to keep a straight line," but considers this unnecessary. "A little practice will enable one to detect the difference in sound between the whirring of the blades when cutting or when revolving freely."

KINDHEARTED LANDLORD

New York, Sept. 20.—It was in Lindy's restaurant to-day that this story was told—about an apartment dweller, who, answering his door bell, was informed that the nice old lady down the hall was about to be evicted for non-payment of rent. "Most of the tenants here are chipping in a few dollars to keep the landlord from throwing her out in the street," exclaimed the caller. "I thought you might like to help too."

"All right," said the tenant. "But tell me—who are you?"

"Me?" replied the altruistic one. "Why, I'm the landlord."

KING CURTAILS HIS SHOOTING

Associated Press

Balmoral, Scotland, Sept. 20.—King George, although he is in excellent general health, has been forced to curtail his shooting over the Scottish moors somewhat because of weakness of the left arm resulting from rheumatism from which he suffered earlier in the year.

He has also omitted some of the formal functions he usually attends during his Scottish holiday because he has found it painful to get into a full dress uniform.

PLAN TO OUTWIT MOTOR BANDITS

Canadian Press

London, Sept. 20.—A "hot" time for motor car bandits is promised in connection with the new police cars known as Lord Trenchard's "Q" cars, designed to drive these bandits off the streets of London.

The commissioner of metropolitan police has put into effect a scheme which he believes will accomplish the desired purpose, and now ramshackle tradesmen's vans rattle and bump on the tram-sets, driven by men in greasy caps and threadbare suits. This is the deceptive appearance of the new "Q" cars.

Beneath the hoods of these vehicles are new super-tuned eight-cylinder engines developing enormous power and speed. With a touch of the accelerator they can at any moment burst into eighty miles an hour. Behind the driver and hidden from the gaze of the curious-minded sits a wireless operator listening with earphones to the dot-and-dash messages sent out in code from Scotland Yard's transmitter. A dozen or more of these new "Q" cars have been fitted out and are in operation.

GUNS USED TO MAKE ARREST

Canadian Press

Vancouver, Sept. 20.—Gunfire provided a stirring prelude to the arrest yesterday wanted for questioning in connection with discovery of a cache of stolen automobile parts.

Detectives William Latimer and George Lefler ran for several blocks chasing the man along downtown streets. When he ignored their command to halt, they fired into the ground. He was finally captured in a main street store.

FRENCH LAWYERS COPY CANADIANS

Canadian Pres

Montreal, Sept. 20.—Although it is usually the other way round, in this particular instance Paris copied Montreal and the authority for the statement is a Parisian, Maitre Ernest Vallier, delegate of the Paris Bar to the recent annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association.

Paris took its clue from this city in formation of a junior bar association modelled along the lines of the Junior Bar Association of Montreal, M. Vallier told that organization in an address following a banquet at which he was guest of honor. The Paris "Union des Jeunes Avocats," he said, was closely following "the evolution of the profession" and was instrumental in bettering the community standing in the efficiency of young attorneys. The Union had succeeded in having adopted considerable legislation which made for betterment of the profession as a whole.

DOUBLY EQUIPPED

The advantage, however, which the young Canadian lawyer had over his French confrere, M. Vallier stated, was that while "the blood of France flows in his veins another blood, that of a race full of vitality—the Anglo-Saxon—mingles there also, making him thus doubly equipped to make a success of his career."

In considering the French legal profession as a whole, M. Vallier said it was only since the war that lawyers had "come into their own." Under the pre-war regime lawyer "had but slim chances of making any kind of a decent living, what with ministerial officers usurping their rights and with little organization in their ranks."

Since the war, however, M. Vallier stated, two associations of legal men had been formed, "Le Cercle des Etudes Professionelles" and "L'Union des Jeunes Avocats." The latter association was open to lawyers who had not attained forty years of age and worked in close co-operation with the senior organization. Their work had been energetic and fruitful, Maitre Vallier said.

AIRMAN MAKES DARING RESCUE

Canadian Press

Stockholm, Sept. 20.—One of Sweden's "Flying Samaritans," the Lappland airplane ambulance service, recently saved the life of an old Lapp woman by a daring flight through [illegible] wilds.

The ambulance station at the fortress of Boden received a call from a Lapp camp situated in a distant and isolated district of Lappland. In spite of the approaching night Sergeant Gunnerfeldt at once set out in his machine. After a couple of hours he landed to pick up the district physician and started again. A dense fog, however, forced the flier down on a lake, where he waited until early morning.

He set out again and reached the Lapp encampment at 6 o'clock in the morning, took the dangerously ill woman on board and at 11 o'clock safely brought her into the hospital where she was attended. Sergeant Gunnerfeldt looks upon his feat as a mere episode in the day's work.

KING GROWS FLAX CROPS

East Anglia May Become Supply Centre For Northern Ireland

Canadian Press

London, Sept. 20.—King George's flax crop at Sandringham has been gathered and the east Anglian harvest this year has been so good that Belgium, the home of the finest flax in the world, may have to take second place in this industry.

"The seed will also be of excellent quality," an official of the Linen Industry Research Association said. "This is a matter of great importance, as it is hoped that east Anglia will become the centre of supply of pedigree flax seed for the northern Ireland flax-growers, who for this commodity have had to depend almost entirely on the foreigner.

"The next stage is the baling of the crop at the quay in King's Lynn, so that it may be shipped to northern Ireland for turning into fibre at Lambeg, County Antrim. Then only will it be possible to determine whether east Anglia can become the producer of a flax crop second to none, and whether modern mechanized methods can beat the inherited skill of centuries in providing for the linen trade a fibre of the famous Courtral quality."

In 1931 the King grew a small acreage of flax on his Sandringham estate and the flax-straw was transported to Ireland, processed into fibre in the experimental factory of the Linen Industry Research Association, and manufactured by noted Ulster firms into a range of different kinds of linen. This linen was presented to their Majesties in December, 1932.

The experiment was such a success both as to the yield and high quality of the fibre, that interest was aroused in the possibility of establishing a flax industry in east Anglia, which up to sixty years ago was one of the traditional homes of flax.

ALDERMEN MAY LOSE OFFICE

Canadian Press

Calgary, Sept. 20.—The city council's efforts to decide whether nine aldermen had the right to retain their seats in the face of their absence from committee meetings failed and further inquiry will be made.

The aldermen, if the city solicitor finds the city charter so rules, may lose their places on the council for not attending the meetings. The solicitor, however, asked more time to study the charter.

MR. PLUNKETT'S STAGE THUNDER

There is no occasion for Mr. Plunkett, M.P., to indulge in mock heroics over the resentment expressed in many quarters in this city at the removal of the Dominion Public Works department here to Vancouver, and the contention that he should have opposed the change as aggressively as he could. He is the elected representative of Victoria at Ottawa, not the representative of Ottawa at Victoria, and his duty as such is to express to the federal authorities the wishes of his constituents. In the present instance the City Council, which is more representative of the public of this community than Mr. Plunkett is, has protested against the change, while even his own party political association has objected to it. If Mr. Plunkett does not feel that he has a special responsibility to the people who elected him to Ottawa to promote and defend their interests, he ought to get out and let the city choose somebody else with a better appreciation of that fact.

Mr. Plunkett defends the removal of the Public Works offices from this city to Vancouver on the ground that it would effect a saving of some $34,000, as a part of a nation-wide policy designed to save $14,000,000. We have it on excellent authority that the change in this particular instance will not save anything, notwithstanding the claim of the federal Minister that it will. We have no hesitation in predicting that within a year the political exigencies of Hon. H. H. Stevens will involve the public office in Vancouver with additional liabilities which will make the $34,000 look small. Mr. Stevens naturally wants to be elected in Vancouver, and jobs must be found for the faithful. It is almost kindergarten knowledge that it costs much more to operate a public office in a big community than it does in a small one. Why not move the national Capital to Montreal?

Apart from this has it not dawned upon Mr. Plunkett that in view of the fact that the Dominion has expended some $20,000,000 in Greater Victoria alone in the last two decades, on works which are under the jurisdiction of the Department of Public Works, the removal of these offices to Vancouver must necessarily impose extra cost upon this community, not to speak of exceptional inconvenience? Will the Ottawa treasury meet the expenses arising from the necessity of Victoria people being required to go to Vancouver to discuss the multifarious matters which are constantly arising out of the close relation of our wharves, dry-docks, dredging and other public works, to the welfare of the constituency Mr. Plunkett is supposed to represent and work for? What about the necessary co-ordination between the federal public works service and that of the province whose headquarters are in Victoria? This will cost something.

But there are more implications to this question. Mr. Plunkett himself admits that there is a prospect of the headquarters of the Marine and Fisheries and Indian departments following the Public Works offices to Vancouver, but says he will strenuously oppose these changes. But that is like closing the stable door after the horse has been stolen. Having acquiesced in the present change because Ottawa (page Mr. Stevens) has told him it was dictated by motives of economy, what value would be his opposition to other changes if Ottawa should claim they were inspired by the same consideration? He says he has no fear that the navy headquarters will be moved. We can extract no reassurance from his confidence, for, although admittedly Esquimalt is the proper place for the navy and permanent militia headquarters from a purely naval and military standpoint, political exigencies and strategy of Hon. Mr. Stevens could easily furnish an excuse, bearing the sacrosanct designation of economy.

We quite agree that at Ottawa Vancouver's battalions are much greater than those of Victoria, and that Mr. Plunkett is at a disadvantage in a conflict with three members plus Cabinet Minister Stevens, who next year will tell the Vancouver electors how he corralled all of the federal services of British Columbia in their city. But the Victoria member is deserving of criticism because not only did he not try to prevent this particular change but actually defends it, and by this attitude encourages the federal authorities, at the instance of Mr. Stevens, to continue the process all along the line.

Nor is this the first time Mr. Plunkett has taken a course in express conflict with the wishes of his constituents. Several years ago he supported the silly, contradictory and wholly untenable ruling of the Ottawa government which prohibited the use of Victoria harbor as a seaplane base, thereby depriving this city of a lucrative industry. This was in the face of resolutions from virtually every public body and political association in the city, including the City Council, the Chamber of Commerce and the service clubs—thoroughly representative of the community—not to speak of the recommendation of the government's own aviation experts, favoring our harbor for this purpose. On that occasion Mr. Plunkett positively was not the advocate of this city, and he is not one to-day. Nor can he obscure the case against him by resorting to cheap stage thunder at a conference with business men each of whom has at least the merit of putting the interests of his city first in his thought and activities.

Finally, Victoria can not escape its just share of responsibility for these developments against its own interests. It chose Mr. Plunkett—comparatively unknown then—as its member at Ottawa simply because he bore a political party label which was popular with its grandfathers. The selection of representatives in Parliament and Legislature by Victoria is something which should be guided by the demands of direct community interest at the moment. When this is not done this community suffers—not in an academic sense to be lightly forgotten over the bridge table or on the golf course—but in personal financial loss and hardship to every citizen. The moral of all this is for Victoria to use its own head—not somebody else's head—at election time.

TARIFFS AND LATIN AMERICA

Increased tariffs, exchange restrictions, import quotas and embargoes have choked the chanels of world trade. They have been no less effective in reducing exports than in shutting off imports. It was obviously impossible for all countries simultaneously to develop favorable balances of trade. The impossibility of this objective was accentuated by the need of the debtor countries to pay their debts in goods. Creditor countries have not willingly permitted their balances of trade to become unfavorable, which is but another way of saying that there are no countries willing to receive payments on the amounts due them. Governments subject to increased expenditure by the extraordinary demands of the depression and deprived of normal income from tariffs and internal taxation have resorted to revaluations of money, moratoria or refunding of debt at lower interest rates, measures tantamount to levies on capital. These have been phenomena experienced throughout the world. The forgoing is the view expressed in the September letter of the Royal Bank of Canada. It then proceeds:

In the countries of Latin America the repercussions of the depression have been peculiarly severe, since these countries were disproportionately dependent upon the proceeds of the sale of their raw materials in foreign markets. They have been unable to resort to foreign money markets and their own financial resources have been inadequate to meet the extraordinary demands of the depression. On the whole, however, the measures which have been taken to meet the depression in Latin American countries do not differ greatly from those which have been put in force in other parts of the world. It is true that Latin America is getting along with a smaller amount of manufactured goods from abroad, that these countries are learning to supply a larger part of their own requirements, but the policies which have made this possible are regarded as emergency measures. In the future it will be the standard of living in the manufacturing countries that will suffer if the countries of Latin America are forced into a permanent policy of self-sufficiency.

Between 1913 and 1929 the exports of the Latin American countries mentioned in the following table rose from $1,417,087,000 to $2,548,400,000. In 1932 they fell to $890,187,000. In considering this rapid rise and fall in annual income it becomes evident that no human wisdom could have foreseen such severe curtailment nor could governments have budgeted in such a manner as to be fully prepared to meet the conditions which they have encountered. Since revenue from exports constitutes a far larger proportion of the total income of Latin American countries than it does of the income of manufacturing countries, the relationship of this table to the problem of South American debt is self-evident.

Exports of Latin American Countries
(Thousands of dollars)

	1912	1924	1929	1932
Argentina ...	$510,278	$794,461	$912,186	$330,984
Brazil	343,002	449,673	450,022	180,615
Chile	149,044	219,533	279,146	27,720
Colombia	33,162	70,615	123,170	67,045
Mexico	127,401	299,094	285,423	157,006

Debts upon which interest and payments on principal could be met with ease between 1924 and 1928, have become unbearable burdens in 1932 and 1933. Before the rest of the world can expect liquidation of this indebtedness it must make provision to accept goods in payment, at prices which bear some reasonable relationship to those existing at the time when the debts were incurred. In the countries of Latin America the world's demand for goods and world price level are matters of supreme importance. It has been through no lack of effort or goodwill on their part that the debts are in default. There is no gold with which to pay, but Latin American countries stand ready and eager to resume debt payments, to re-establish their good name as debtors and to purchase increasing quantities of foreign manufactured goods when world markets have been opened to their raw materials.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

TRAINED BRAINS
The Winnipeg Free Press

So far the world has been very cagey of brains, especially academic brains. But perhaps it would do no harm to give them a trial. At least it may be suggested that industry has pointed the way, for the last two decades has seen the great commercial enterprises of the nation drawing heavily upon the universities.

THE GOOD ROADS FALLACY
The L'Illustration, Montreal

We are not opposed to a good roads policy, for it is part of a progressive development which cannot be arrested, but it should be practiced with discretion, always remembering that there are many other important causes to be promoted, and that the progress of society demands the methodical and wisely co-ordinated development of all its activities. Roads are, in fact, merely accessories, and the government made a mistake when it sacrificed to them other enterprises more important and more indispensable to the life of the community.

LUSCIOUS LOBSTERS
The London Saturday Review

What would the feasts of Lucullus, Trimalchio and the imperial gourmets of Rome have been like if cold storage had been invented in their day? The question is suggested by the news, which comes plumb in the middle of their season and ours, that lobsters, by a new method, can be frozen in South Africa and guaranteed to deceive the very elect, a month later into thinking that they were, as the strawberry vendors put it, "morning gathered." This is excellent news and we wish all success to the new branch of empire trade. South Africans maintain that the local lobster has to be eaten to be believed, others that the best come from the western shores of Ireland. Before the war the local price on the coast of Mayo was half-a-crown a dozen and the big ones at that! Has the local method of dressing ever been tried in England—stewed in milk with potatoes, with Irish whisky stirred in by the hardier natives? Here is a free tip to an enterprising English restaurant.

Vancouver is welcome to it—but it will lose a lot of fun if it gets what it wants—they believe weird things in the jungles of Granville Street—we sit on the International doorstep—and the collectors are active next door.

RIPE IDEA

AN INDEPENDENT candidate on the Lower Mainland (alas, the election, like King Charles's head, will bob up even in a respectable column like this) is running on the ripe proposal that the provincial capital be moved from Victoria to Vancouver. He says that Victoria is a backward, mediaeval place and its influence has been fatal in making the government just like it, backward and mediaeval, and thus retarding the development of the country.

Here, indeed, is the unkindest cut of all. After Vancouver gives us the P.G.E., after it insists on that road programme which finally sank the treasury, after it forces those expenditures that finally sank the Tolmie Government, now the Mainland blames poor little Victoria for holding up the development of the country!

If we are to be held responsible as Victorians for the activities of provincial governments, if we are to be held responsible for the mess which even now reposes on our doorstep, just on the other side of the Causeway, then we'd better move the capital to the Mainland. It will save us a lot of trouble.

Besides, we should get far more fun out of politics if the capital were over there, and we couldn't see our statesmen at such close range. In Vancouver they get a thrill out of politics. They read avidly what comes from Victoria about our politicians whom we see on the street every day and who provide us with no thrill at all. Distance lends such an enchantment to this view that they think governments and legislatures amount to something. We lose a lot by being so close to those things, and knowing them so well. We would be better with the simple faith and childish credulity of the Mainlanders. Besides, we could turn the Parliament Buildings into an interesting museum of freaks, almost more interesting than it is now. We could supply the contents, too, without going beyond the city limits.

SOLEMN DUTY

SOMETIMES I pause in reverent silence when I think of the responsibility of conducting a column like this, which, very soon, is declared by multitudes. Still, I always manage to recover from my speechless agony and march on again, bearing my load with a splendid cheerfulness, never letting the public see how I suffer underneath this rugged exterior. But when I observe what an eminent columnist like Jim Butterfield, of The Vancouver Province, tells the poor yokels of the Mainland, and how they believe it, I pause again in horror, wondering if I am ever guilty of such mass misinformation here.

This is what Jim says about the advisability of an NRA programme in Canada: "We have nothing to reconstruct. Our construction is very well, thank you. What do we want presidential domination for when we have parliamentary government? When the doings of the parliament do not suit us and the opposition is in a position to demonstrate that fact, the government goes out. If the United States could only get a government that could be put out upon an adverse vote in the House on a major matter, it would be as prosperous and safe a nation as we are."

MAINLAND

AND IT is to the Mainland, within the orbit of such suns as Jim, that they want to move the capital of this Province! No doubt they believe this kind of thing over there, not having had the advantage of our Victorian culture and a reliable informant like me. There are so many important things wrong with these profound statements, and all of them striking at the root of our whole Canadian system, that one hardly knows where to start.

Firstly, they have presidential domination in the United States because the nation demanded it, almost unanimously, through Congress, elected Roosevelt for that single purpose. We have presidential domination here through Mr. Bennett (whose unknown cabinet ministers are all office boys) without ever voting for it or wanting it.

When the doings of Parliament don't suit us, the government does not go out. It waits for four or five years or, in British Columbia, longer, long after the country is sick unto death of it, as it is now.

In the United States they have a congressional vote every two years and vote on the existence of governments every four, just as frequently as we do.

And finally, how lush and appetizing is the notion that if the United States had a government like ours it could be as prosperous and safe as we are! With only a million unemployed, a ruined trade, a debt and financial structure which can't possibly be carried without an enormous improvement in business, and that soon.

What a lovely example we are for the United States or anyone else to follow! Well, I suppose it is a good picture to give outsiders, but the fact is that Canada has done less to face the depression and meet the problems of this time than any allegedly civilized nation I am aware of. And right now, too proud under Bennett to adopt any scheme of recovery itself, Canada sits on the doorstep of the United States, praying that its neighbor will get back on his feet and that somehow we shall pick up a few crumbs from the rich man's table. Every Canadian in his heart knows that is true. That is why you have a strong Socialist party and wild men shouting in the streets. It is the deadly inaction, the sense of futility, the feeling that we aren't going anywhere, that makes men wild.

COLLECTORS

NOW THAT autumn has come and the ground is suitably moist, my young friends next door have commenced collecting again. They don't collect stamps or coins or old prints. Theirs is a more vigorous and manly hobby. They collect worms. Did you ever collect worms? Not for the base and carnal purposes of fishing, but simply for the pure, aesthetic and spiritual satisfaction of the hobby? Probably not. Probably you haven't the necessary imagination. Probably you can't understand the little girl from next door when she says that "worms are so slick and smooth and wriggly, very keen and jolly."

"Slick," says her brother, with three clenched in his fat little fist.

This year's collection is shaping up well. The little girl says she has seventeen now in her baking powder can, which is half full of earth. The largest and fattest one is called Peter and is easily distinguishable from Mary and Jane, his sisters, who are rather scrawny old maids. If you take Peter out of the can he'll wriggle off the palm of your hands with remarkable vigor, Peter being the original worm that turned. And he can stretch out to a surprising length and cover great distances on the garden path before he is put back into the can. Whereas Mary and Jane just lie and sulk.

"Pretty, pretty," says her brother, clenching his tighter.

Life is not all beer and skittles for pet worms, though, even if they are fed sugar and bread crumbs. Take the tragic case of Jerry. There was a vigorous dispute as to the ownership of Jerry, who was going peacably about his business on the garden path. Both the collectors claimed to have seen him first. Both asserted the rights of possession. One collector grasped Jerry by the neck. The other grasped him by the tail. Both pulled and poor Jerry parted in the middle. Now there are two Jerries, rather smaller than the original Jerry.

HOLACAUST

AND THEN there was the holacaust which overtook the entire collection of the little boy next door. He put his baking-powder tin down absentmindedly in the house between periods of active collecting. It was not until the lady next door observed a peculiar smell arising from the back of the stove that the full extent of the disaster was discovered. The entire collection was cremated, and collections of that sort, when cremated, smell very bad. Now the collectors are not allowed to bring their pets into the house, and the little girl next door is afraid that Peter may catch a cold in his head if the weather gets severe. Her unfortunate fellow collector has had to start his collection afresh, from the ground up.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

CENTURY OF PROGRESS

Steamboat, iron plough, cotton gin,
These the marvels men might see
When this century came in,
Back in eighteen-thirty-three.

With a great ox for a steed
And a water-mill for power,
Little thought had men of speed,
Cruel demon, splendid dower.

But this century has brought
Magic gifts to you and me;
Tasks, undreamed of once, wrought
Now, in nineteen-thirty-three!

In Chicago, at the fair,
We are shown a world made new;
All Aladdin's dreams are there,
Brighter, that they have come true!

Boundless realms swing wide the doors;
Lords of electricity;
Man to newer marvels soars
Still, in nineteen-thirty-three!

PLUNKETT'S EYEWASH

To the Editor: — Mr. Plunkett's apology for allowing the Federal Public Works Department offices to be removed from Victoria is, of course, just so much eyewash. So alert is he as federal member for this city that it was possible for outsiders to come in and literally snatch this department away from under his eyes in broad daylight. Even the Victoria Conservative Association has been more assertive in this than he. The probability is that he, with the broader vision of a statesman, knew nothing about it until it was an accomplished fact.

Anyway, how far would Mr. Plunkett's objections prevail against Hon. H. H. Stevens, especially when Mr. Stevens sees office buildings empty in Vancouver and thinks they have a right to be filled?

Economy talk on the part of Mr. Plunkett is by way of afterthought. As a straight party man he is only uttering here what Mr. Stevens and others at Ottawa have sent him to say. Economizing may be possible by reducing the size of the staff, but why should the cutting be 100 per cent on the Victoria end, with Vancouver ending up with something she did not have before?

Then economy talk goes down with difficulty when the public sees the same government, with its other hand, making large salary appointments, admittedly not necessary, but made only to pay personal political debts.

The net result of what Mr. Stevens has done, and of what Mr. Plunkett has failed to do, is that Victoria has lost a coast headquarters department which has been located here since the earliest days as the logical site from which to cover all coasts, and with its office located on government-owned property.

Unfortunately, Victoria seems to have nothing to offset the pull of high-rental, but vacant, real estate of high political influence.

BRAINS VS. FROTH

To the Editor:—May I reply to Mr. John Day's letter in which he urges that the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount are the one and only solution, and criticizes Elsie Turner for her desire "for something deeper and richer and of more intellectual content."

Too much hope has been placed in that primitive code and these surgary platitudes. What is needed is the assimilation of our increased knowledge in the search for the good life. In the Middle Ages, when pestilence appeared, people gathered in churches to pray and as a result the disease spread. To-day we realize that a good physician is more useful to a patient than the most pious and devoted friend. The good life involves intelligence rather than emotional froth over vague moral maxims.

The same idea applies to society as a whole. To live a good life one must live in a good society where conditions make education, friends, love, children (if a person desires them) possible, as well as a sufficient income to provide for cultural betterment besides mere necessities, good health and work that is not uninteresting. Such a society cannot be built to-day upon the simple generalizations of the past.

As A. N. Whitehead, Professor of Philosophy at Harvard, has pointed out in his recent book "Adventures of Ideas," the main current of our thought, from sociology to education "are derived from an unbroken tradition of great thinkers from Plato to the end of the last century. The whole tradition is warped by the vicious assumption that each generation will substantially live amid the conditions governing the lives of its fathers and will transmit those conditions to mould with equal force the lives of its children. We are living in the first period of human history for which that assumption is false. To-day the time-span of important change is considerably shorter than that of human life, and accordingly we require such an understanding of the present as may give us some grasp of the novelty which is about to produce a measurable influence on the immediate future."

Such is the present situation. And if we are to live the good life in a good society where it is alone possible, we certainly need "something deeper and richer and of more intellectual content" than what Mr. John Day has to offer.

In conclusion it is worth while to compare Aristotle's ethic with that espoused by Mr. Day. In the former a man lives according to benevolence and intelligence and seeks to attain self-government and direct his life well, and with the greatest cultural and intellectual maturity he can achieve. In the latter, righteousness consists in blind obedience to divine commandments and an uncritical enthusiasm over hoary platitudes, in which commandments and platitudes there is not a single word of serious interest in those mature matters of scientific, artistic or philosophic concern without which men are indeed "as little children."

THE AVALANCHE

To the Editor:—At last we are about to have the feast of orators for the next six weeks flooding the people of B.C. with all their petty solutions of the problems facing the people to-day.

Are the people interested? Are they giving the consideration necessary to be able to act intelligently on November 2?

We have before us again the Tory Party, whose record is well known. The Liberal Party also is trotting out its usual reforms. Which will bring back prosperity? Also we have another party designated the C.C.F.. This last party, as far as I can gather, is going to command a large following. Hence it is up to the voters to investigate what t latter has to offer us.

The leaders of this party tell they are going to buy out the ind tries; also their official paper, T Commonwealth, tell us their wh policy is one of public ownership.

Having read the history of work class movements in most all ot countries, I have come to the conc sion that the C.C.F. has nothing new offer. In fact with Bowser, offering u employment and health insuran Pattullo offering state banks and t raising of sufficient credit to put men back to work, or a decent ma tainence, they seem to have taken t whole thunder out of the C.C.F. pr gramme.

But what is this public ownership do for us? Let us take a look at the C Country, where it was advocated twenty years or more, and in so cases put in operation, and so-call "Socialism," which of course is m leading.

The Daily Herald, London, on D cember 14, 1925, writing on nation ized institutions (public ownerahi says: "So far from being a charge the community the P.O. has in th teen years, 1912-13 to 1924-25, made profit of £44,000,000, all of which h gone in the relief of taxation. Sin 1914 there has been a decrease of mo than 24,000 in the staff, while mu work has been added to the P.O., th has resulted in speeding up and ove work."

Also it says: "The present shar holders in mines and railways cou receive state mine or railway stoc based on valuation and bearing a fix

CANADA NEEDS PROGRESS PLAN

U.B.C. Professor Tells School Trustees Definite Programme Required

Action Similar to U.S. Scheme Essential; Education Must Be Maintained

Courtenay, Sept. 20.—Reviewing the various plans which are being tried in many countries of the world to cope with the depression, Dr. W. A. Carrothers, professor of economics at the University of British Columbia, warned the B.C. School Trustees Convention yesterday against sacrificing the education of youth at the present time.

Loss of personal liberty either through Fascism or Communism, he declared, was one of the greatest dangers of the age, and proper training will be imperative in making a wise decision.

Introduced by Hon. Joshua Hinchliffe, Dr. Carrothers brought the greetings of President Klinck to the convention.

He declared there was more thinking to-day on economic questions than at any other time, possibly in history.

"I do not want to discuss the causes of the present situation," he said, "but rather the processes in operation to redress them."

A lack of balance between production and exchange was to blame, he said, and unemployment was the lack of balance between those who wanted to work and the amount of work available.

The need to-day, he said, was a planned system of economy. But the danger of a planned system was that it impeded progress. And for this reason, he said, the great need to-day was for careful, wise leadership.

Dr. Carrothers declared it was a fallacy, to-day, to say that Canada could develop a self-sufficient country. Such a country, he said, would require a drastic reduction in population, because Canada has lived by an outside market for its surpluses.

He said he did not believe what has happened in the latter years of the depression was the result of deliberate planning by business men or politicians. They were, he said, the victims of circumstances.

France, he said, was justified in deflation from the view of her own people.

GOLD STANDARD

Contrasting the standard gold price with the present price, Dr. Carrothers declared Canada could not have stood the strain if she had remained on the gold standard.

He characterized the United States experiment as interesting and important. He quoted Dr. Gregory, noted British economist, who recently said the United States plan could not succeed. He thought such an expression inopportune, and did not think anyone was justified in saying, yet, that it would fail.

Russia, Italy, Germany and United States were characterized as immense economic experiments, still in progress.

Discussing the United States experiment, Dr. Carrothers declared that some similar type of action must be taken in Canada.

"If our leaders do not do this," he said, "then we must try somebody else."

Stressing the need for safeguarding education, Dr. Carrothers said the youth of to-day must face even more difficult problems than those of the present, and wise decisions can only be made by those who have been properly trained.

Unemployed youth, turning to anti-social activities, was seen as a present danger, and a definite system of adult education was declared an imperative necessity.

"What we need to-day is not a retrograde system but a progressive system."

He declared it was absolute folly to think the depression was to last forever or that it could be conquered by destroying wealth or decreasing production.

"It is time that we wake up from the lethargy of the past few years. We sacrificed a generation in 1914. Let us not sacrifice another generation by any short-sighted policy."

rate of interest. It also could be affected without making the capitalist poorer or lowering their standard of life."

Now, if this is "public ownership," where do the workers benefit? Where does higher wages come in or a higher standard of living as promised by the C.C.F.? Or are they just another party only concerned with getting into power on the backs of the workers through their discontent of present conditions?

BAMBOO

To the Editor:—Many read with delight the article in The Victoria Daily Times of last Saturday, entitled "Bamboo."

The fact that many varieties of the Chinese and Japanese bamboo can be successfully grown on the southern part of Vancouver Island is not generally known.

Imports of bamboo from the U.S. alone to Canada in 1931 amounted to $13,859; unmanufactured material.

Given proper cultivation the growth of the plants is amazingly rapid here My bamboo during the growing season grow at the rate of four inches per day (twenty-four hours) and the annual increase of the plants is usually about four feet in height. I have a bamboo hedge, planted in September, 1930, which is now more than ten feet high.

Bamboo is an evergreen plant. So putting aside the commercial possibilities, there could be no finer propaganda for the climate of Victoria than to have bamboo growing in the city in positions readily seen by visitors. The few bamboo plants already in the city are hard to find and probably owing to lack of attention are by no means impressive.

I have no axe to grind in the matter as I am not selling plants, but shall be glad to give any information I can to anyone who may be interested in bamboo growing. I can refer you to Mr. Robertson, the provincial horticulturist, and to Mr. W. H. Warren, park superintendent, both of whom known my plantation.

A REMEDY

To the Editor:—With the platforms of the various parties being placed before the electors, each one seems to be outdoing the other in suggested reforms of a socialistic nature—but so far no one seems to have thought of the real panacea for the ills that beset us.

Why talk of nationalization of banks and utilities, or why stress the need of free hospitals for the sick, and pensions for everybody, when these are only make shift methods which will increase the burden for all?

My solution is for all the countries of the world to immediately pay off their national debts with printed currency.

Of course this money would be of little use to foreign holders, so they would spend it in the country of issue, to buy commodities, thus bringing about the needed revival of trade.

The creditor nations and people would be thus compelled to sacrifice a little more to the debtors, and wealth would be redistributed in a thorough way instead of by half-hearted methods suggested so far.

All countries being saved the burden of interest could gradually clean up the currency over a period of years.

ONE MORE EXPERT.

REGENERATION

To the Editor:—We are inclined to believe that both the amicable and the inimical critics of our last letter were not cognizant with the content of the letters to which ours was a general reply, for had they been they would, as other readers, have taken it as a bit of mild and inoffensive sarcasm on our part, and certainly not as an expression of self-commendation and recommendation. As things stand we owe no one an apology either for the matter nor for the manner of our writing.

Mr. Dan. Reveyer's attitude in regard to the Bible should, however, have the approval of all true Christians. God's infallible Word indeed denies the natural man's claim to even the smallest spark of inherent divinity prior to his regeneration. God says to him: "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

Of course everyone has a right to believe or to doubt the Bible. If it is what it claims to be (and it is), it must be accepted in its entirety or not at all, in like manner that a bridegroom and a bride, after the mutual promise belong to each other, not partly only, but altogether.

Therefore, those who take the Bible as it stands, as God's oracle and revelation to men, have more right to be its defenders (should it require defence) than those who believe it only in part.

That the regeneration mentioned previously is most essential is confirmed by the conversation the Lord Jesus Christ had with Nicodemus, who although a master of Israel was far behind the repentant murderer on the cross, who had eternal life promised him upon his acceptance of Christ as his Saviour, whereas the former, who, although a doctor of divinity, was told that unless born again he could not see the kingdom of heaven.

Any amount of human philosophy and science, high-sounding though it may be, is estimated very little by the Creator and Originator of all true philosophy and science, and He warns against any counterfeit of the real thing in no uncertain manner when He says: "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ . . . avoid profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called, which some professing have erred concerning the faith."

We therefore rather stake our all on the sure and never changing statements of God's Word than on that of pagan mythologists, for we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when was made known to us the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ!

Provincial School Control Is Opposed

Trustees Do Not Support Nanaimo Plan to Turn Over Full Powers

Nanaimo, Facing School Closure, Strongly Urges Move at Convention

Canadian Press

Courtenay, B.C., Sept. 20.—A proposal, submitted from Nanaimo that the provincial government should assume full control of schools was debated at some length, and, at moments, with some heat, during yesterday afternoon's session of the British Columbia school trustees associations convention here. The resolution, however, was eventually defeated.

J. Kerr, of Nanaimo, and Mayor J. Barsby, of Nanaimo, in urging adoption of their resolution, decided that conditions had become steadily worse under present conditions, and held that their proposal would help materially in solving the problem. Teachers, under their proposal, would become civil servants.

J. Harwood, veteran member of the association, denounced the suggestion hotly, characterizing the proposal as a move to put the children of the province into politics.

Mrs. T. Barnard, of Nanaimo, voiced the hope that "trustees would call the bluff of those who collect the money, and close the schools."

"People who oppose this are five years behind the times, that's all," she declared.

DUTY TO CHILDREN

"The state has a sacred duty to educate the children, and I don't care if they take some power from the school boards."

The motion, however, was lost by a fair majority.

Vancouver's suggestion that a moratorium should be asked at Ottawa on sinking fund payments, and that interest rates should be reduced also aroused considerable discussion.

Mayor Barsby supported the move strongly to reduce interest rates. R. H. Neelands, Vancouver, outlined reductions which had been demanded in the city's schools, stressing that salaries had been cut unreasonably.

"And the money went to the bondholders and the usurers," he said.

"We were told we could not do a number of things because of the Bank Act. But when did the Bank Act become more sacred than the School Act?" he asked.

A Burnaby request to set aside one mill of the tax rate annually for school purposes was laid aside indefinitely, in view of the commission inquiry that is now being carried on in British Columbia.

ECONOMICS COURSE

Vancouver's proposal for introduction of a course in economics into grade seven was adopted, and a request from Duncan for more expedition in disposing of teachers appeals to boards of reference was also approved.

A Burnaby suggestion that high schools should revert to the three-year term was lost, and a Harwood request that results of examinations should be given to trustees before they were handed to the press, was also defeated.

Nelson was chosen as the site of next year's convention, in a one-sided contest with Harrison. Penticton, which also submitted an invitation, withdrew in favor of Nelson, which was the overwhelming favorite of the delegates.

PLAYS ORGAN MINUS FINGERS

Canadian Press

London, Sept. 20.—Although three fingers are missing from his right hand, Reginald Silby Lewis was among the successful candidates at the last examination for the associateship of the Royal College of Organists. His success is a story of triumph over exceptional difficulties.

His right hand was shattered at Ypres, where he was an artillery officer, and it was feared his ambition as an organist was entirely frustrated. However, after several operations in hospital he "came back," and passed his examination without any concession.

He had studied law for a while, but music was his natural bent. His success is a triumph of will power as well as musicianship, the examination for the associateship of the Royal College of Organists having been almost a fantastic objective at first, and now Reginald Silby Lewis holds the diploma of the world's leading school of the organ.

ONION GROWERS MAY NOW UNITE

Reports From Kelowna State Apple Men May Set Example

Canadian Press

Kelowna, B.C., Sept. 20.—Possibility onion growers of this district might act in an effort to establish higher prices for their product was seen today as apple growers consolidated the position they attained for orderly marketing.

Onion growers held a meeting Monday evening. At present they are being offered $12 a ton for their product. It is said an additional $10 a ton would enable them to meet costs and overhead expenses.

Some growers were reported to be planning to form a vigilance committee to see there was no backsliding from the stabilization board agreements reached recently.

Building in Germany now is confined almost exclusively to repair, renovation and remodeling.

MRS. PENDRAY TO BE HOSTESS

Y.M.C.A. Ladies' Auxiliary to Hold Tea at Beach Drive Home September 29

The ladies' auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. held its first meeting of the autumn season yesterday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. R. W. Mayhew, Beach Drive, all the new officers being present.

Plans were made for the opening function of the season, which is to take the form of a tea at the home of Mrs. J. C. Pendray, Beach Drive, on Friday afternoon, September 29, from 3 till 5.30 o'clock. The affair promises to be a most enjoyable one, Mrs. W. E. Staneland being in charge of the musical programme and Mrs. A. S. Locke convening the refreshments.

This tea will afford members an opportunity of renewing their memberships, and it is hoped there will be a large attendance of members and friend on what promises to be a delightful occasion.

Y.W.C.A. CLASSES STARTING SOON

Clubs and classes for the fall and winter programme are now being started, the first of the season being the "Y" Corner Club, which will meet on Thursday evening, at 7.30 o'clock, with Mrs. Maude Hammond as leader, when suggested plans will be discussed. There is no charge, and all girls are invited to attend.

Tuesday, from 7 to 9 o'clock, Mrs. Yates will take charge of the popular woodcarving class, and the same evening, from 8 to 10 o'clock, Mrs. J. N. Gibson is anticipating starting a class in dressmaking, if sufficient applicants are enrolled.

Wednesday afternoon, from 2 to 4 o'clock, a pottery class will be opened under the capable supervision of Mrs. Groos, and materials will be supplied for a very nominal fee.

Other classes will be formed if sufficient inquiries are made through the office.

Weddings

GARNETT—STILWELL

Duncan, Sept. 20.—A quiet but very pretty wedding took place at St. Peter's Church, Quamichan, this afternoon at 3 o'clock, when Archdeacon H. A. Collison united in marriage Louis Harold, only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Garnett, Cowichan Bay, and Violet, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ernest Stilwell, Duncan. Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked very charming in a smart knitted suit of navy blue, with close fitting blue hat and a handsome fox fur, the gift of the bridegroom. Mr. W. Colfer acted as best man. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was attended by relatives and immediate friends. After the honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Garnett will reside at Ganges.

SUPPORT MANY MISSIONARIES

Anglican W.A. Doing Fine Work, Board in Toronto Learns

Canadian Press

Toronto, Sept. 20.—Extent of support of the Women's Auxiliary was shown at the meeting of the board of management of the Missionary Society of the Church of England in Canada here.

Statistics showed there were thirty-two missionaries overseas, two Bible women in Korea, twenty-eight missionaries and eighty-one missionary helpers in the Indian schools, six missionaries under the Arctic mission and six missionaries and fourteen helpers under the Oriental board of missions in Vancouver as well as one missionary to Jewish people—all supported by the women's auxiliary.

Thirty-eight children of missionaries had been assisted by the W.A. through bursaries and the Dorcas department had provided hundreds of bales of clothing for the missions in the north and west.

REFUSES AID; DIES OF WANT

Aged Woman Recluse Collapsed After Caring For Dozen Pets

Associated Press

San Francisco, Sept. 20.—Miss Mary Donaldson, seventy-seven-year-old recluse, who refused charity care, distributed her scraps of food to her dozen pets yesterday and then fainted.

Ambulance attendants who went to her home to persuade her to accept care at a public hospital found her unconscious. She died in their ambulance on the way to the hospital.

On Monday, Miss Donaldson made it clear she would not accept public charity. When police and ambulance attendants, summoned by neighbors, who reported the woman was destitute, went to her home, she said: "Public institutions are for the old and feeble, not for a woman like me."

It was in a renewed effort to persuade her that the ambulance attendants went to her home yesterday. They were too late. Miss Donaldson had won her fight against public charity.

Although she had lived in a dwelling here for more than twenty years, neighbors knew little about her and she refused to accept aid from them. There was ample testimony she was a woman of culture and refinement. That was all the neighbors could say, except she possessed a strong spirit of independence.

John Hosie Will Speak In Aid of Needy Settlers

"Empire Building in the West" has been chosen by Mr. John Hosie, provincial librarian and archivist, as the title of his illustrated lecture to be given under the auspices of the H.M.S. Resolution Chapter, I.O.D.E., in St. Mary's Hall, Oak Bay, on Friday evening, September 29, in aid of chapter funds.

Mr. Hosie will discuss early days in the Cariboo and other mining areas, correlating the experiences of the pioneers of former years with those of to-day. British Columbia gold mines are so much to the fore in the public mind [illegible] absorbing interest to many to learn of conditions and methods employed.

The work of the chapter is to help isolated settlers in the Peace River block, through the Red Cross outport hospital at Grand Haven. It is peculiarly appropriate, therefore, that a discussion of pioneers of other times should benefit the residents of this outlying section of the Dominion.

DEBATE FUTURE OF MISSIONS

Native Successors to Missionaries Recommended to Board By Retiring Bishops

Canadian Press

Toronto, Sept. 20.—Nationalization of foreign missions, the church's attitude toward the enfranchisement of the western Canada Indians and the anti-semitic movement in Europe were questions discussed at yesterday's session of the annual meeting of the board of management of the Missionary Society at the Church of England in Canada.

Resignations submitted by Bishop H. J. Hamilton and Bishop W. C. White of the diocese of mid-Japan and Honan, China, raised the question of the future national character of the church in those areas. Both of the veteran missionaries recommended the naming of a native successor, an action which would partially involve the transfer of foreign church work from missionary to native control. It was decided to appoint a commission, consisting of the general secretary, Canon Sydney Gould, and Archdeacon Snowden of Ottawa, to visit the two fields in the near future and to bring back date on which a decision could be arrived it.

Rev. Dr. T. B. R. Westgate, superintendent of the Indian reservation schools, recommended only those Indians who had attained a standard of competency be granted the franchise. This would prevent the possibility of Indians being made a "political football," he said.

Shortly before adjournment the board went on record in a resolution expressing deep sympathy with the Jewish people in the suffering of many members of their race in Europe.

Metropolitan W.M.S. Hear Mrs. McClung

On Monday afternoon the members of the Women's Missionary Society met in the Metropolitan schoolroom, the president, Mrs. W. H. Whiteley, in the chair. After the opening hymn and prayer, the reports were read. Mrs. Smith, the strangers' secretary, reporting 113 calls. Miss Baker gave a very interesting talk on Christian stewardship.

Mrs. Harper, who is on her way east, had prepared the programme, leaving the meeting under the capable leadership of Mrs. Tuck. After the hymn Mrs. Trowsley led in prayer, and the Scripture reading by Mrs. Scott was taken from the 15th chapter of John. Miss [illegible] joyable solos, "My Task" and "The Rain Is On the River."

Mrs. Nellie McClung, the guest speaker of the aftrenoon, held the interest of her audience as she gave a very instructive and interesting address on "Words." Of special interest to mothers was the suggestion that parents should read suitable books to their young children and educate them in the use of good words rather than encouraging the use of slang.

Mrs. English thanked the speaker for her instructive address, and also moved a very hearty vote of thanks to Miss Deaville for her delightful solos. Dainty refreshments were served under the convenership of Mrs. Smith, bringing an enjoyable and profitable afternoon to a close.

Your Baby and Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

BE ALERT TO RECOGNIZE ANY ABNORMAL CONDITION

Perhaps no appeals which come to this department are so heart-breaking as those from mothers who have made a mistake which ended fatally. No matter how blameless she is—and she is always blameless—her torture is indescribable.

I have heard recently from a mother whose baby died of a thymus gland enlargement discovered only after her death. The mother wanted me to warn mothers that there is such a condition and not, like her, to ignore it.

NO MEDICAL AID

Another mother had a son slightly ill for about five days. They lived on isolated ranches and her husband advised her not to worry, the boy was not very sick. The boy grew worse, then better, then suddenly without warning was gone. The doctor wrote a long name on the death certificate and the mother was left to bewail her loss and her stupidity in not calling aid before it was too late.

A third letter is before me this minute. "I am writing this," it reads, "not to obtain help but as a suggestion to the many, many mothers who are reached by your column. Our sixteen-months-old baby was perfect in appearance, large, fat, alert, active with firm flesh. She became ill with a high temperature and though she was taken to a hospital she was dead in three days. The doctor said acute inflamation of the kidneys. I feel sure she must have had some abnormal kidney condition previously and I want to warn mothers to have the urine checked frequently."

REGULAR EXAMINATION

These are the materials of tragedy, but it is not in the light of these that we must fashion our daily care of children. Some things can never be prevented even by the promptest aid. Mothers must, if they are to survive at all, keep health, not accidents and illness in mind.

All children should have adequate diets and good health care. They should have a general physical overhauling once a month if possible, once every three months at least. Unusual symptoms should not be disregarded. Every mother knows when a child breathes wheezily that it is not a normal condition. When a child has fainting spells regularly that is not a normal condition. When he has fever, constant colds, coughs, eruptions or persistent languor they are not natural conditions. It is folly to wonder why. It is sensible to allow some doctor to uncover the cause. The child who is ill longer than twenty-four hours despite sensible home care and isolation in bed, needs attention. It is by such means that we ward off tragedy, without living constantly in fear of it.

To-morrow: "Complementary Feedings Boon to Young Mother."

Lodge Social—Lodge Primrose will hold its social meeting on Friday, in the S.O.E. Hall at 7.30 p.m., to be followed by dancing and cards. Members having articles for the rummage sale to be held on Saturday morning at Johnson Street are asked to telephone Worthy Sister McKenzie, the convener.

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mrs. McKinnon, "Cordova," View Street, when she entertained her many friends on the occasion of her birthday. Among the invited guests were: Mrs. A. Atkinson, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. E. Crump, Mrs. A. Dickson, Mrs. Gregor, Mrs. Fleming, Mrs. Woods, Mrs. O'Kell, Mrs. Simpson and Mrs. McKinnon. A buffet supper was served after an enjoyable evening of cards. Mrs. McKinnon received many gifts.

Recalls Pioneer Mission Days In Eastern Ontario

Canadian Press

Picton, Ont., Sept. 20.—Mrs. W. L. McFarland of Toronto, addressing the centennial of the Presbyterian Church here, gave many intimate glimpses of her great-grandfather, Rev. Robert McDowall. She produced the Bible which the itinerant preacher carried with him on his long treks over a territory of 282 miles of unbroken country. Other letters and manuscripts of great interest were read by the speaker; a paragraph of one gives some idea of the hardships which were the common lot of the early settlers.

"In 1798 Rev. McDowall came to Canada with the United Empire Loyalists and made his home in Adolphustown on the shores of the Bay of Quinte, where his four children were born. His letters indicate that the Indians caused much trouble, by attacking and wrecking the homes of the settlers, who were forced to hide their most valuable small possessions, while watching homes and furniture go up in flames."

There was no swerving from the fundamentals of the gospel message in the early days of Presbyterianism in Picton, neither in practice nor theory. Strict observance of the Sabbath was adhered to by the saintly Mr. McDowall, as was illustrated by Mrs. McFarland when she told how her great-grandfather had thrown a batch of biscuits out the door because he felt that they were too fresh to have been baked on Saturday.

Lake Hill Dance—The opening dance of the basketball season will be held in Lake Hill community hall on Friday evening. A popular orchestra will supply the music for dancing, which will continue from 9 to 12.30 o'clock.

The Shining Talent

By ELEANOR EARLY

(Copyright, 1929, by NEA Service Inc.)

She unpacked her bags, and hung up her clothes listlessly. They were wrinkled. And her prettiest dress, the lovely blue one, was faded almost colorless by the Italian sun. There were her colored felt hats—wrecks, all of them. And her shoes, scuffed out at the toes. Dusty streets, and miles and miles of museums! And she'd give anything in the world for a good cup of coffee. She hadn't had a taste of decent coffee since she could remember. And bacon and eggs. Oh, how she'd love some bacon and eggs.

"Good lord," she fretted, "I wonder why they can't learn to cook bacon."

All travelers get to feeling that way. It's a feeling that usually sets in on rainy days. Or when there hasn't been any mail from home for a long time. When the sun comes out, or the mail arrives, it usually passes. But when it persists, despite sunshine and letters, the only thing to do is to disappear. Before, she had always stopped at hotels. But in Florence, in order to economize, she had gone to a pension, which is rather like a boarding house in America. Only most pensions are nicer than most boarding houses. And Pension White, on the River Arno in Florence, happens to be run by one of the nicest women anywhere.

Molly was begining to cry, when Signorina Benvenuti knocked on her door. Perhaps she had guessed that Molly was travelworn and tired, and disappointed because there was no mail.

"Wouldn't you like to begin getting acquainted with Florence?" she asked. "There is time before dejeuner to stroll down to Ponte Vecchio, if you care to."

Molly looked blank.

"Ponte Vecchio," Signorina hastened to explain, "is the little old bridge that crosses the Arno. You'll know the minute you see it, because I'm sure you must have seen hundreds of pictures of it. Artists have been painting Ponte Vecchio for a thousand years, I guess. It's where all the jewelry shops are tucked away. Many of them are on the very spots where goldsmiths sold trinkets to the Medici."

Molly wiped her eyes.

"I've been having a dreadful fit of blues," she confessed. "But shopping always braces me up. Thank you so much, Signorina."

ing, "to make up for the little diamond that he gave me. Maybe I can find an antique in one of those old shops."

It was almost too good to be true. She ventured into a stall that was smelly and down-at-the-heel. And there sat an ancient silversmith, sticking rubies in the eyes of a silver monster, on a silver ring!

The old man spoke no English, but he called a school boy apprentice in, who was studying the language. And the boy said that the ring was a copy of one worn by Lucrezia Borgia, who secreted a poison powder in the the head of the monster. He showed Molly the secret spring that opened the creatures head, and there was a place to hide poison enough to murder a tiresome lover any day.

The apprentice conferred with the master.

"Twenty-five dollars," he said, "and hand-wrought, Signorina, by the finest smith in Florence. And the eyes of the monster are of rubies."

"I'll take it," she declared, fearful lest the apprentice had made a mistake and would correct it before she could acquire possession.

It was not until she bought, in the marketplace, raffia handbags for 29 cents—the kind that sell for $5—that she felt quite sure Florence was a wonderful place for shoppers.

Happily she returned to Pension White, with the precious ring for Jack and amethyst earings for Rita.

Signorina herself drew back the big bolt on the door, and admitted Molly gayly.

"The mail has come," she declared, "and also a cablegram."

It costs such a lot to cable from the States to Italy that a cable is sometimes a rather fearsome thing. Molly took it nervously, and tore it open.

"I hope it is good tidings," remarked Signorina Benvenuti.

She was sorting the letters of her guests, and placing them on a table. And her back, as she spoke, was toward Molly. She turned when she felt a little fluttering hand on her shoulder.

Molly's arms were outstretched and shaking. Before Signorina Benvenuti could catch her, she had fallen. The cable was in her hand. . . For the first time in her life Molly had fainted.

CHAPTER XXVII

Servants came running when Signorina Benvenuti called. Signorina chafed Molly's hands, and pressed brandy between her lips. And, when she could not be revived, they carried her to a divan in the living room; and the concierge went on his bicycle for a doctor.

Then Signorina Benvenuti retrieved the cable that had fluttered from Molly's stiff fingers.

"RITA DEAD," it read. "INSISTED DURING CONSCIOUSNESS THAT YOU BE NOTIFIED IMEDIATELY. BOB."

Tears came to the Italian lady's eyes. Her sympathetic Latin nature responded readily to the grief of any living thing, and for the little American girl traveling alone she wept sincerely.

Molly stirred, and her eyelids fluttered.

"I have great sorrow for you, Signorina," murmured the mistress of the pension. "I have read your message, and weep my grief."

Molly stared with unseeing eyes.

The concierge had returned with the doctor. And the murmur of anxious voices penetrated her consciousness. She raised herself on her elbow. Everything was clear now. She remembered the cable, and realized she had fainted.

"My best friend is dead," she said, "and I must go home immediately, to take care of her baby. I, I hope I didn't frighten you. It was a dreadful shock."

Signorina nodded understandingly.

"To be sure," she murmured. "A dreadful shock. I shed tears myself."

She wiped her eyes.

"The bambino?" she asked. "You will be mama to the little bambino?"

"I promised my friend," exclaimed Molly, "that if she died, I would take her little girl. She was ill then. But I never realized the end was so near. She did not seem very sick. I never dreamed. . . ." Molly's voice broke.

"Sometimes it is better," consoled the older woman, "when death comes quickly. God knows best. May He have mercy on her soul."

Molly nodded through her tears.

"Yes. Rita wouldn't have wanted to suffer and be ill. I know that."

"She was content, maybe, to die, when she knew you would be mama to the little bambino," declared Signorina. "And now if you will have a glass of my wine. . ."

She profered a goblet of purple liquid. The sun, slanting through the shutters, filled it with light, so that it grapes from which it came.

"It will revive you," she said.

Molly drank it gratefully.

"I feel better already," she declared. "I'm sorry I was weak and silly. I must have frightened you. Do you know, Signorina, when there is a boat for the States?"

Signorina did not know, but soon the concierge was busy with sailing lists and steamship tracts. The Conte Grande was sailing from Naples on Thursday. He would arrange immediately for reservation. Did Signorina wish to send a cable?"

Molly dictated a message of sympathy to Bob. It was good to have someone do her thinking for her.

Bob's answer was delivered the next day—the day of Rita's funeral. Whatever Rita desired, he said, should be done. Molly was very kind. He would meet her in New York, and they should talk things over. Thank God, he added, little Rita was too young for grieving.

Jack cabled too. Bob had told him that Molly knew of Rita's death, and that she had offered to take the baby. He sent his sympathy, and commended her for her generosity. But there was not a word of love, nor hope expressed that he might see her in New York. When Molly read it, she practically decided to give the Borgia ring to Red Flynn.

Red had been wonderful about writing. Molly fancied that, between the lines, she could read a great many loving expressions. But the letters themselves were chatty and gossipy. She should commercialize her fame, he advised. Another play, perhaps. Or a book. Maybe she could do some short stories. She was still the child wonder of Broadway. The ingenue prodigy. The red-haired baby-girl who could call the tricks any old day.

"They're eating out of your hand—the dear public," wrote Red, "but they're fickle as a flock of women. Keep 'em while you got 'em—and ride 'em for a flock of suckers. Can't you dish up another order of Crime, with a little Sex on the side? And give it to 'em hot, dear. Hot and medium raw. And make 'em love it!"

Reading a letter from Red was like talking to him. He had good ideas too. His insistence upon holding the public, when she had them. Now was the time, she knew, to keep it. Before very long she would be forgotten. And, after that, she would have to start all over again.

Mr. Durbin had written, urging that she begin work on another play. "The Death of Delphine Darrows" had proved the sustained hit of the season. He seemed willing to take a chance on almost anything Molly might write.

"But don't turn sweet-pie on me," he warned. "The public has you tagged as a girl who knows her crime. You can't pull any love among-the-daisies stuff on them. . . How about a nice, juicy murder?"

Molly had torn up his letter impatiently. She did not want to be tagged as a girl who knew her crime. Better love-among-the-daisies than a "nice juicy murder!"

Now, crushed with grief by Rita's death, confronted with the prospect of a long and unbearable lonely voyage, she decided to devote the entire trip to the task of writing another play. For some time she had resolved in her mind the dramatic possibilities of a tragedy of young love—the sympathetic study of a modern, thrill-seeker.

Life had furnished all the characters. The tragedy had taken place while Molly was in College. In real life, the inglorious hero had been murdered.

For the purpose of a play, she would have him commit suicide—in a sacrifice to honor and chivalry. But, until the last moment, the audience must believe him murdered. Even the defendants, and his sweetheart, must believed him murdered.

The plot should revolve about the love of mother and daughter—each ready to give her life, to save the other—each believing the other guilty of murder.

A freshman in college had fallen in love with a man whom her parents considered unworthy. Learning of the romance, her father had gone to the boy.

There was a stormy session, during which the youth declared that the girl was pursuing him, that she had thrown herself at his head, and that whatever happened was her own fault.

The next day the mother of the girl bought a revolver. Two days later the boy's body was found. He had gone to a grove, presumably to keep a tryst with the girl. There was a bullet through his head, and, beside his body, was the revolver purchased by the girl's mother.

3 MONTHS ON BISCUITS AND MILK

Woman's Digestive Troubles

Everyone who is subject to any form of indigestion should know of this woman's experiences. Advice from one who has had such severe attacks is advice worth having. She writes:—

"I suffered from indigestion, gastritis and constipation, and was so very ill I had (on medical advice) to live on soda biscuits and milk for three months. Well, a friend advised me to take Kruschen, and now I am pleased to say my troubles are ended. I can eat and enjoy a good meal without any painful after-effects, my skin is clearer—in fact, quite clear—and there is no sign of constipation. I would advise anyone suffering the same to take Kruschen."—(Mrs.) M. R. L.

The immediate effect of the six salts in Kruschen is to promote a natural flow of the digestive and other vital juices of the body. Soon after you start on Kruschen you will find that you are able to enjoy your food without any distressing after-effects. And as you persevere with the "little daily dose," you will see that the relief which which Kruschen brings is lasting relief.

Uncle Wiggily Throws Stones

BY HOWARD R. GARIS

Uncle Wiggily was laughing and twinkling his pink nose. The rabbit gentleman was hiding behind a fence near a tree from which the Pipsisewah and the Skeezichs had just shaken down heaps and heaps of apples. The two Bad Chaps did not see the rabbit gentleman.

"And as long as they don't see me," chuckled Mr. Longears, "I think I can play this trick on them and get some apples for myself. I mean for Nurse Jane to make into an apple pie."

Uncle Wiggily had started out on a sort of adventure trip and, at the same time, to look for apples. But when he found the tree he could not reach up to pick any apples, nor could he jiggle the tree and shake any down.

All at once though, the Pip and Skee came out of the bushes and they shook down many apples. Some they chewed and nibbled. But when they began to stuff the remainder of the apples into bags Uncle Wiggily saw that he was going to get none unless he did something.

"So I'll do something!" he said, hiding behind the fence. I'll throw stones!"

Now throwing stones may seem a queer way to get apples, unless you throw stones up into an apple tree. Even then it is better to throw sticks than stones for stones cut the apples. But Uncle Wiggily wasn't going to throw stones at the apple tree.

"I'll throw stones at the Pip and Skee," said the rabbit gentleman, still laughing.

He picked them up.

Now of course throwing stones isn't exactly polite. But then the Pip and Skee weren't polite either, so that doesn't count.

As a matter of fact, Uncle Wiggily wasn't going to throw stones right at the Pip and Skee. He didn't want to hit the two Chaps, bad as they were; he only wanted to tease them.

"Here's where I begin," he said.

On the ground, near where Uncle Wiggily was hiding behind the fence, but within sight of the Pip, the Skee and the old apple tree, were many round, smooth stones like tennis balls. Uncle Wiggily picked up one of these stones and threw it close to the Skee, but not close enough to hit him. The stone hit the tree and bounced back.

"Hi there!" growled the Skee to the Pip, "don't be throwing apples at me that way."

"I didn't throw an apple at you," said the Pip.

"Well, then, don't be throwing stones," said the Skee.

"I didn't throw any stones!" declared the big Bad Chap.

"Yes you did!" snarled the Skee. "There it is!" and he pointed to the stone on the ground.

"I didn't throw that," said the Pip. "It must have fallen off the tree as the apples fell."

"Stones don't grow on trees," said the Skee.

"Well, never mind, fill your bag with apples and we'll go to our den and make a dumpling," suggested the Pip.

So the two Bad Chaps kept on picking up apples and then, still hiding behind the fence, Uncle Wiggily threw another stone. This time he threw it at the Pip, although without hitting him.

"Ho, so you're trying the same trick, are you?" yelled the Pip.

"What trick do you mean?" asked the Skee.

"Throwing stones," answered the Pip. "You nearly hit me."

"Look here!" said the Skee suddenly. "Somebody is playing a trick on us. You didn't throw a stone. I didn't throw a stone. It must be somebody behind that fence who is throwing stones at us."

"What shall we do?" asked the Pip. "Shall we go catch him?"

"No," answered the Pip. "We haven't time. Let's stay here and throw apples at whoever it is."

This was just what Uncle Wiggily wanted. The rabbit gentleman threw more stones at the Bad Chaps. Then, stepping to one side out of the way, he watched the Pip and Skee pick up and throw over the fence a lot of apples. There were no stones for the Bad Chaps to throw or they might have done so. Anyhow a lot of apples came over the fence.

"Thanks!" laughed the rabbit as he picked them up and ran away.

"Why, it was Uncle Wiggily!" said the Pip as he saw the rabbit.

"He fooled us again!" snarled the Skee. So Mr. Longears got his apples for the pie. And if the rubber boot will play a tune on the shoe horn so the slippers can dance with the cake of soap, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's apple pie.

"NO RIDERS ALLOWED"

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Traction officials at a convention were told the government had given permission to distribute windshield stickers to auto drivers on which NRA would mean "no riders allowed." Hitchhikers have become a "major problem" to transportation companies, said an official.

Fossils, 6,000 years old, found recently in Los Chilos Valley in Ecuador, are said to strengthen the theory that South America once was populated by yellow races.

Horoscope

"The stars incline, but do not compel."

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1933

Conflicting planetary aspects are discerned in the horoscope for to-day, according to astrology. After the early morning hours the rule favors the cautious.

There is a sign fortunate for constructive projects, but judgment may not be reliable if new plans are undertaken.

Steady progress toward business recovery is indicated by the stars, but under this sway doubting Thomases may retard advance.

Again oil properties appear to be under a rather sinister planetary government, but the stars foreshadow gradual adjustment of marketing problems.

Under this direction of the planets retaliatory efforts may be attempted where heads of industries or labor organizations oppose government policies.

Astrologers point out that the faults of many dwellers on the planet Earth may be due to their stars and not to themselves. However, the prognostication is one of advancement toward established prosperity.

Autumn should be unusually fortunate for florists, since there is to be increased use of blooms of many sorts in American homes, according to astrologers.

Beauty in all its forms is to be sought with renewed zest after the long period of depression, which has submerged esthetic desires beneath practical necessities.

Jupiter continues strongly helpful to all constructive efforts of state and national government. Warning is given, however, against the expression of American impatience, for recovery must be slow.

In the coming winter many critical problems are to confront the people of the United States, the seers announce, but they will be courageously solved.

Gangster power is to be fought triumphantly, but warning is given that the stars presage the need of wisdom and caution in meeting existing conditions.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of decided changes. Old shackles will be loosed and better associations may be expected.

Children born on this day probably will be adventurous and able to carve out their own destinies. Subjects of this sign usually are endowed with foresight and initiative.

Before final victory an outbreak of lawlessness which includes major crimes is forecast, and it is well to remember that individual co-operation is important as an aid to government machinery.

John Loudon Macadam, Scottish engineer who contributed much to roadmaking, was born on this day, 1756. Others who have celebrated it as a birthday include Louis Joliet, 1645, early explorer, and Clarence C. Dill, 1884, United States Senator.

IT'S ECONOMICAL TO PLAN YOUR MENUS IN ADVANCE

Most families return to their normal routine with the opening of school and vacations and visits give place to work days. Menus must be planned that will be nourishing and satisfying for the demands of work and not for play and guests.

All through September and into October, if possible, fresh fruits and vegetables hold first place in menus. They are such important factors in keeping both children and adults in good health that they are almost indispensible in the daily diet. Canned vegetables can be substituted if fresh ones are not available, but vegetables, canned or fresh, must be included if a balanced diet is provided. However, both fruits and vegetables are at the height of their season and consequently inexpensive and abundant in variety.

MENUS SHOULD BE SIMPLE

Menus planned especially for the needs of growing children should be simple in type, but the addition of one or two courses to a simple, well-planned meal will turn it into a satisfactory informal dinner. A soup, canned or home-made, or a salad of fresh fruits or vegetables, will do wonders to the plainest meal. If these materials are not at hand, it's amazing how the addition of home-made relishes or conserves, garnishes or hot baking powder biscuits will furbish up a decidedly every-day menu.

A week's menus planned in advance is a definite means toward economy Money, time and labor all are saved, marketing is checked and the frantic haste when it is nearly meal time and nothing is planned is done away with. In many instances it also enables one to double up on cooking processes. Enough potatoes can be boiled at one time for the immediate meal and a potato salad or creamed potatoes for the following one.

Utilizing Odds and Ends

A meat pie, timbales, hash or croquettes are planned to take care of the left-overs from a roast. Bread pudding, bread crumb pancakes or a "mock duck" take care of the week's accumulation of stale bread and crumbs. A jellied salad in the middle of the week makes use of the odds and ends of fruits and vegetables most satisfactorily.

vegetables can be bought very cheaply in such quantities as pecks and half bushels. After reckoning what will be needed for table use, the surplus can be canned or preserved for winter. These purchases usually cost little more than the pound purchases required for one meal earlier in the season and effect a worth-while saving.

TO-MORROW

Breakfast — Peas, cereal, cream, baked French toast, syrup, milk, coffee.

PASTOR GIVEN GUN

Allerton, Ill., Sept. 20.—They greeted Rev. J. T. Hendrix with a shotgun when he came home from the Methodist Conference.

It wasn't that the pastor isn't liked, in fact he was so greeted because the parishioners think highly of him. The gun is to hunt game with, and thereby cut down the cost of living, for the pastor's pay isn't very large.

WHAT ONE GIRL WORE

By Betty Brownless

With the first cool days of autum Milday's thoughts turn instinctively t that most necessary item on her shop ping list—the fall coat. And not with out reason. For, not only is it far to soon to think of wearing the heav cloths and furs of winter, but in th selection of frocks for autumn wear th chic girl bases her color choices on th color of her coat. That is to say, tha just as in decorating a home on chooses the rug first and then harm onizing draperies, etc., in chosing wardrobe the coat should come firs and then, bearing the color of the coa in mind, frock, hats, and accessorie should be selected to harmonize.

One of the smartest coats we ha seen is illustrated here to-day. Cut o diagonal lines, its material is gray beige wool, of just the right texture an weight for fall wear. The smart collar gauntlet cuffs and jaunty pockets are trimmed with black Astrakhan, and the belt buttons are also of Astrakhan.

The high waistline, which continues in favor, features this coat and the fullness at the bottom lends itself to graceful folds. The coat, as will be noted, is quite long—about twelve inches from the ground—so that it fully covers the fashionable length of dress.

New Coats Follow The Straight and Narrow Path

Coats Are Severely Straight in Line With a Slimming Tubular Silhouette

The Straight Silhouette Influences Even Fitted Coats, Which Shape in Only Slightly at the Waistline

The straight, pencil, silhouette dominates fall and winter coat fashions. Waistlines are merely being hinted at, instead of being form fitted. Great fluffy fur collars, or bands of fur trimming, widen the shoulder line. Fur borders are in order for coat hemlines to equalize the wide shoulder effect and balance the silhouette.

SHOULDER INTEREST

Swirl and roll collars of fur achieve this effect, concentrating interest above the waist, but these collars snuggle in around the neck and do not extend over the shoulders. Accordingly, epaulets and tucks or folds are introduced in the fabric treatment of shoulder lines. This extended width is intensified by the mass of fur above and achieves the ultimate in broad shoulder effects.

Fur borders were never more important than they are this year. They outline revere collars, define epaulettes, form fence necklines, and line up in rows to form deep trimmed borders for hemlines.

Drawstring necklines, such as fur band collars, draw up to fit snugly in the new higher contour. The latest versions of the drawstring neckline roll outward like little bolsters or ruffs drawn up tight around the neck and framing the face. Bands of the same fur as used for the drawstring neckline may be repeated at the shoulder, for epaulets or border trimming and dress up the appearance of the coat.

FABRICS

Velvety Oxford woolens are very new for formal coats, and also appear in the suit and dress fashion picture. Boucle woolens and suede finish woolens present a smooth or ribbed surface for your selection. Both are smart, although, of course, ribbed fabrics are tremendously important and very new. The vertical ribbing cleverly slims and straightens out the line to achieve a tubular silhouette.

Wool crepes are a conservative but smart choice for dress coats. They lend themselves well to dressmaker detail, are elegant in appearance, and harmonize equally well with short or long hair fur trimmings.

Practically every sport coat that has any claim to importance is made of tweed. Tweeds are walking off with all the honors for coats that have a busy life ahead of them. They are ready and willing to stand up under the strain of daily wear and tear. Tweeds were never more interesting. Checks, diagonal stripes, line plaids and a variety of novelty weaves, including mixtures, furnish a wide selection and they are all smart.

FURS

Luxury furs have the lure of intrinsic value and personify quality and richness. They interpret the elegance of the mode and are formal and very flattering. Silver fox, mink and Persian lamb are aristocrats of the fur world and will be used extensively for coats of distinction.

Light foxes are full of youthful appeal, and are particularly smart on black. Deep glowing shades of green are important for new coats, and mink is the perfect choice for rich contrast.

Monkey fur is up to tricks, and is very, very sophisticated. But you just have to be the haughty, willowy type to wear it successfully. Otherwise you will look just shaggy and not a bit smart.

Caracul, beaver and lynx are three old standbys that go on forever, and are a safe and sane choice.

Short haired furs of descriptions leap into big importance for bands and borders. Furs like leopard, barandukl and susliki are "spotted" for big importance.

Suit and Ensemble Possibilities

Jacket Suits Are Tailored in the English Manner—"Wardrobe" Suits Are Problem Solvers

When is a suit not a suit?—the answer is: When it is an ensemble. A jacket, blouse and skirt comprise a three-piece suit—a coat, blouse and skirt comprise an ensemble. Suits wear jackets, and ensembles wear coats. They are closely related, however, but the ensemble coat is wearable with other things, and the jacket coat is not versatile. This may account for the increased importance of ensembles for fall, as compared with jacket suits. The ensemble coat is a top coat with many uses, and there is something about a coat that seems much warmer than a jacket on the first brisk days.

The two-piece ensemble is sometimes called a two-piece suit. However, the two-piece idea is carried out in a dress with a coat to match; whether you choose to call it a suit or an ensemble. Again the coat is a separate top coat for emergencies, and the dress will carry on under winter coats.

The very newest thing in ensembles is topcoat, skirt and tunic jacket. The coat lining matches the tunic, and ties the whole thing up very smartly.

The three-quarter length coats to ensembles are more boxy than swagger for fall, and may be worn with or without a belt. This type of ensemble predominates in tweed, and may be furred or unfurred. If you want to be very tricky, however, separate square cut sailor collars of fur give you furred or unfurred neckline and bib. These detachable sailor collars are favorites in raccoon for the college girl, and become more dignified in beaver or fox.

An entire wardrobe may be purchased in one fell swoop by annexing the versatile ensemble that boasts a coat, skirt and two-piece crepe dress. Both the coat and the dress are wearable separately—the top of the dress forms a blouse for wear with the skirt. The skirt can be sportsy or dressy, by choosing a sweater or a silk blouse as the occasion demands. The two-piece crepe dress worn with the coat is suitable for informal afternoon — and so on and on. There is just no end to the quick change possibilities of this idea.

A black bouclet woolen formal suit with squared-off shoulders achieved by the galyak yoke which extends over to form the upper sleeve.

Jacket suits, that are frankly just a skirt and jacket, and do not even try to turn into anything else are classic suit fashions that demand attention this year because of their English tailored lines and trim silhouettes plus the grandest collection of tweeds to choose from, including hand loomed ones that just fairly ooze quality. Harris tweeds complete the English influence and they come in checked and striped weaves that are smart as well as sturdy.

Formal suits are smart in black but appear importantly in other costume colors as well. The three-quarter coat is practically the unanimous choice for this type of suit and may be belted or unbelted. A belt just across the front or just across the back is newer than a belt all around.

Broad shoulders are the rule for suits as well as coats and dresses, and the smartest formal suits resort to fur for their shoulder width. Fur yokes that extend over to form the upper sleeve and continue upward in a snug fitting high collar line are handled like fabric with a sleek, trig appearance. Leopard, galyak, caracul and other short haired furs adapt themselves to this fur yoke treatment with a "dressmaker" touch that adds to the formal feeling.

BELTED WAISTLINES

To be or not to be is a difficult question when it comes to belts. You may be frankly belted, or you may be beltless in front and belted at the back. Inset belts that become free at the sides and buckle at the back are a happy compromise.

EVENING WRAPS

The Edwardian Influence for Formal Fashion Is Reflected in Sumptuous Creations

Evening fashions have become more luxuriously formal with an air of grandeur borrowed from the regal splendor of the 1900's. There is no more fitting medium for interpreting elegance than evening wraps. Beautiful fabrics and beautiful furs combine to achieve the ultimate in quality, which is the foundation of good taste.

The formal silhouette presents two important themes for consideration. The long, slenderizing wrap that flares at the hemline follows the sheath silhouette with its balanced skirt base. The three-quarter wrap that wraps around in a fitted, molded line continues important, and is suitable for the older woman as well as for gay little social butterflies.

Intricate sleeve detail is essential to smartness in wraps of any length. Shoulder width is cunningly contrived with pleats, shirring or capelets. Sleeves are full at or above the elbow and square the silhouette without becoming too severe.

Luxury fabrics such as deep pile velvets and metal thread fabrics capture the spirit of formal elegance in its richest, most appealing mood.

White furs are always at their best on evening wraps. Ermine is regal to the very tip, and nothing could be more classicly beautiful. However, there are many white furs of less forbidding extravagance. White fox is a precious fur that has quality, intrinsic value and flattering smartness to recommend it in lieu of ermine for the very young, but it costs considerably more than the proverbial song.

White furs, however, are available for the budget conscious, and are really lovely in hare, sheared lapin and bunny fur. They are soft, flattering and wear extremely well.

Chinchilla-like furs are quite sophisticated and very, very smart.

Black is the leading color for evening wraps, not because black is of major fashion importance—but because black velvet always seems the most practical choice.

Rich jewel tones with depth and glowing beauty are simply irresistible in velvet, such as sapphire, emerald, ruby and even darker reds. Purple velvet is the royalest expression possible. Do not wear it with ermine if you have mislaid your crown! Dark green and brown are important, and a deep taupe gray is a new color on the horizon for evening wraps, but has a dignified sombreness more suitable for [illegible]

Separate Fur Scarfs and Capes Are Elegant Accessories

Separate fur scarfs have always been the smartest possible accessory and their usefulness knows no bounds. The simplest little frock becomes a gown when a fur scarf is added for out-of-doors. They furnish just the necessary bit of covering for early fall and spring days and dress up unfurred coats on really cool days.

Fashion has gone elegant and furs and elegance go hand in hand. The separate fur scarf this year will find a rich background in luxury fabrics such as velvet and satin.

The importance of black, particularly for satin, immediately calls to mind silver fox, and a silver fox scarf with a black satin gown—well; what could be lovelier? However, light furs in contrast with black are very smart and very youthful. Also, light dyed foxes are not as expensive as silver fox.

Luscious wine shades and a long range of greens are fashion colors for fall and will favor brown accessories. The richness of brown furs such as sable, kolinsky, martens, mink in small animal scarfs, will be the perfect finishing touch.

Furs have gone in for color in a big way, and white fox scarfs dyed in bright or pastel shades for evening wear may startle us.

FUR CAPES

Separate fur capes and saucy pellerines are very 1900 in feeling and when worn with a muff they are even more so. These little capes extend over the shoulder, and are very effective for achieving the all-important broad shoulder line.

The newest thing in fur capes is quite Victorian and reminiscent of a coach-and-four and liveried footmen. This aristocrat of capes falls well below the hips and is finished with a small square collar fastening with a frog. Mink, of course, claims this for its own, but it can be had in Hudson seal. The final touch of picturesqueness is furnished by a matching muff; not very large and barrel shape, with a cluster of white violets added if you are really in the mood to take it all very seriously.

Other new capes that are less imposing are somewhat square in outline and are most formal in mink and ermine. Daytime versions use summer ermine.

FLAT FUR SCARFS

Fur ascots and slip-through scarfs were never more important than they are this year. They are attached to both fur and cloth coats and also dresses—but as a separate accessory they can be kept busy all the time. They are not expensive and a wise investment for the limited wardrobe. They can be worn with so many things and always look smart.

Spotted furs are grand with woolens and an ascot of suslikl, barandukl or stenciled lapin will completely change the appearance of a simply tailored wool dress.

There Are Two Sides to Every Story

REVERSIBLE WOOLENS

The trickiest costume imaginable presents a simple, innocent appearance at first glance, but it is decidedly two faced. The jacket and skirt are reversible, and the pattern is entirely different on opposite sides. This is a practical idea for college wardrobes and is exciting and amusing besides.

LININGS

Satin is the most persistent fashion that has cropped up in years. It is literally just all over the place. The smartest evening gowns, afternoon frocks, daytime dresses, hats, accessories and blouses are made of satin. It also invades the inside story of fashion importance, and has superseded crepe for coat linings.

Woolen linings are of greater importance this year than ever before. The importance of box coats, worn straight or swagger, has brought woolen things to the fore. They are warm and the loose fitting lines of the box coat need a bit of extra breeze resistance. Woolen linings are very gay. They furnish bright contrast in solid color, checks or plaids—and appear in fancy mesh weaves and printed cashmeres.

FUR-LINED COATS

Fur-lined coats might be called a "joke on the bears" as they consider fur worn on the inside warmer than fur worn on the outside.

The fur-lined coat came into prominence with last year's swagger silhouette. The newest fur-lined coat is the mannish ulster which is straighter in line than last year's swagger. Fullness at the back, which is smart this year for sport type coats, adds to the possibilities for fur linings, as the bulky line leaves plenty of room for the introduction of fur.

MONKEY FUR FOR TRIMMING

Monkey fur seems to have a corner on sophistication, and when used on hats for the coxcomb silhouette or just sprayed all over the top of crowns, it waves about in the slightest breeze and succeeds in looking windblown without loss of dignity.

Black and white satin formal costumes with epaulets of monkey fur or collars bordered with monkey fur are just the sleekest things imaginable.

Distinctive Silhouettes Highlight New Fur Coats

Shoulder Details, Yoke Treatments and Neckline Interest Intricately Fashioned

Once upon a time fur coats were accepted as quite the grand gesture just because they were fur and therefore valuable. The line was predominantly simple and did not bother much about distinguishing little details that are essential to make any coat really smart. But fur coats have become very fashion conscious, and insist upon making their debut each season in the smartest possible versions of the prevailing silhouette.

Fur is being handled like fabric and delights in intricate detail and perfect fit without bulk any place except where it belongs according to the mode. And so we find the new fur coats throwing out their shoulders in the smartest possible manner and with pardonable pride.

SLEEVE DETAIL

Sleeves are full of importance for dresses, coats, blouses, suits—and, of course, fur coats. The new silhouette continues to demand wide shoulders, although they are not quite as wide as last season's. The shoulder width for fall and winter broadens the line, but it also adds a little height.

This shoulder detail is cleverly worked out in fur with folds and pleats (as shown in the illustration) that are manipulated into the smartest sleeve silhouettes with the same success as in fabrics.

YOKES AND EPAULETS

Yoke treatments in fur have increased in importance. Yokes that extend over the shoulder line and form the upper sleeves give a trim squared shoulder effect and appear on both fur coats, in contrasting fur, and on cloth coats, instead of the more prosaic fur collars.

Epaulets are on just about everything and fur epaulets are on just about everything, too. They appear on fur coats less often than they do on cloth coats, silk or woolen dresses and even evening fashions. Both long and short-haired furs predominate.

NECKLINES

Necklines are higher than ever this year, and everyone knows that fur close against the face is a notorious flatterer, so we are going to be flattered to death this winter and like it.

Big fluffy collars of long haired fur swirl and envelope the neck and shoulders in luxurious abandon.

Scarf collars of short-haired fur may be part of tiny fur capes, or part of fur yokes, but they tie up snugly high at the neck with either ascot ends or slip-through ends that look like big fur bows.

Band collars that stand up and hug the neck are very trim and very new. They enhance the broad shoulder line and square you off above the waist in a military fashion.

FUR BORDERS

The new silhouette is not concerned just with shoulder width—it carries its importance down to hemlines and fur borders play a big part in carrying out this trend. The border may be at the knee or at the bottom of the hem and may be narrow or quite wide. Rows of fur banding are the most popular expression, and do much to dress up fabric coats and also dresses. Wide bands of long-haired fur are quite the elegant addition to both cloth coats and fur coats.

The Spectrum of Coat Colors

Black and brown are coat colors that cannot be equaled for wearable, practical value. They head the list every year for conservative choice, with new line and detail to give new interest.

The choice between black or brown is usually governed by the relative becomingness of one or the other. The wise woman sits down and does some thinking about the coming season's wardrobe and the first consideration is the basic color around which the entire wardrobe will be built.

If you look your best in black, a black suit is clearly indicated. But be sure you are not inveigled into buying a brown dress because it is "cute" or a bargain.

On the other hand, if brown is your color, stick to it, and you will have a wide range of greens, wines and beiges to choose from for frocks that will harmonize with your brown coat. Black satin frocks are terribly smart, but positively dowdy under brown coats—so beware!

Dark grays and Oxfords, and the new eel gray are conservative, but new in feeling. They furnish a welcome change from the perennial black and brown, if you feel the need of a change, yet are not at all radical.

Greens are important for all types of fall and winter fashions, and appear in a luscious dark shade for coats. Red with a brown cast that tones it down is very cheery, but you may grow tired of it. However, if reddish brown becomes you, by all means have it while it is smart.

Orangey rust is the gayest of the new colors, and is predominant in youthful styles. Rust color is more subdued and has wider appeal, and if you have been wearing brown for years on end because you know you just cannot wear black, here is a chance to go in for something a little different without putting all your brown accessories in the discard.

Formal or Casual Styles Equally Important

Both formal and informal coats are mixing their furs very democratically. A very dressy coat may be of a relatively unimportant fur and swagger coats appear in haughty mink.

DRESSY COATS

The most flattering version of dressiness in fur coats is the sheath coat with a long-haired fur collar, such as broadtail, caracul, Persian lamb with fox collars—silver fox on moire caracul being ultra ultra.

Formal coats of mink are sufficient unto themselves. There is no need of any other fur for trimming on mink. That would be gilding the lily. However, mink coats this year have revived the stole scarf to add to their elegance. Long stole scarfs may be worn as throw scarfs with one long end down the front and one down the back, or they may be crossed in front with both ends down the back. Worn this way they give a smart cape effect.

SEMI-FORMAL COATS

Semi-formal coats of fur depend upon line for distinction. Caracul, beaver, Hudson seal, kidskin and leopard with scarf collars or little capes of self material have a formal air that is not too dressy nor too casual. This type of fur coat is appropriate for just about every occasion.

SWAGGER COATS

Swagger coats this year are really semi-swagger. They are straighter in line and more boxed. The swagger coat of fur follows this trend and becomes less sportsy and more versatile, and hemlines flare out a bit in deference to the new balanced silhouette.

Swagger coats are no respecters of aristocracy—they "swagger" with self-assurance whether made of muskrat or mink.

Black, brown or gray kidskin, Hudson seal, black caracul and leopard are classic furs for swagger coats. Less expensive furs, such as lapin, leopard cat, muskrat and raccoon are favorites with the younger set and quite essential to the college wardrobe.

In the more formal furs such as caracul and seal, some of the newest swagger coats are slightly fitted in a slimming line and shoulder width is thereby accentuated. Wide collars, epaulets or flat puffs broaden the line and also border on the semi-formal.

Hats Join The Forward March For Smartness

Tricky Crowns "Point" to the Peak of Smartness in New Fall Hats

Berets, Brims That Roll Up in Back, Sailors and Draped Effects Furnish a Diversity of Interest

Millinery fashions are on the forward march and their goal is your right eyebrow. Brimmed or brimless, the new hats move downward and forward toward the right eye. Crowns have gone completely irresponsible. They do not care how they do it, so long as they get up in the world. Height is concentrated toward the back and is achieved by peaks, folds, sharp points or high placed trimming. Many crowns have two or three irregular peaks that look like a birdseye view of mountain ranges. There is an elfish spirit to the newest peaked caps that is reminiscent of gnomes and brownies.

A bengaline turban that goes up in the back and down in the front.

The beret is back and grand news that is, too. Even berets have gone "high hat"—they go in for altitude climbing at the back and then nose dive straight for your right eye.

Sailors have gone romantic. There are velvet sailors that drip ostrich plumes down the back of your neck and when worn with a velvet gown the effect is picturesque to the nth degree.

Toques that mold the head are always a joy, and are very smart. They perch the trimmings at a precarious angle atop the crown for added inches.

Brimmed hats achieve individuality by depth at back and manipulated crowns. The brims are narrow and the smartest ones turn up in back. Of course, the brims dip down over the right eye.

Even sailor brims turn from the straight and narrow to salute the right eye. Sailor hats wear their crowns with a bit more dignity, however. The crown is higher, but not really peaked.

FABRICS

The felt hat remains a classic and is most important in casual types that stand weather, crushing and much pulling about.

Velvet and satin are tremendously important to complement the vogue for velvet and satin dresses and accessories.

Ribbed woolens and fuzzy surface woolens are headliners that will grow in importance to match winter coat fabrics. The idea of hats and coats to match has been borrowed from little sister and gives a perfect ensemble effect.

Hatters plush comes back into the fashion picture to tie up with the elegance of the mode. Its glossy finish goes well with satins and the pile surface adapts itself to velvet. Worn with dull velvet, it gives a smart bright and dull contrast.

COLORS

A wide range of colors that are sombre, soft or very, very gay add interesting accent possibilities to the newest hats. Black and brown are still with us and greens range from dark to bright, with all the in-between shades included. Pansy shades, sapphire blue and Chinese red are some of the bright high spots that are worth remembering. Eel gray is an important costume color that is duplicated in millinery to complete ensemble color schemes.

TRIMMINGS

Birds of a feather do not flock together when it comes to millinery. Feathers of all descriptions are important, and will flock together at smart gatherings in a varied assortment ranging from quills to curly ostrich tips and so on to aigrettes and ostrich plumes.

Feathers do not fly away with all the honors, however. Rattail braid, etched crystal ornaments, rhinestone clips and buckles and even flowers are smart trimmings. Veils are back, too, and flare out all around, but suddenly eclipse the right eye completely, following the silhouette in its downward-forward line.

BLACK AGAIN

QUILTING

This idea did not originate at Aunt Dinah's quilting party—but quilting really is very smart on collars and cuffs and peplums. It squares off sailor collars, too.

Hair Ornaments

The demure little Alice in Wonderland hair band started the vogue for hair ornaments and they have reached their greatest importance for evening wear.

Jeweled ornaments, such as clips to hold back wayward curls or winking little rhinestone stars are very smart. Bands of rhinestones and baguettes are most impressive on young girls and they often have little bow knots, one over each ear, or a larger bow knot in the centre.

EMBROIDERY DETAILS

Discreet touches of bead embroidery posed at the shoulder and repeated at neckline, or on a belt, can be very gay or very elegant—such as coral beads on brown, or steel beads on black.

All of which, of course, has a very slenderizing effect at the waistline in lieu of diet.

Handbags for Fall and Winter

The Newest in Furs

COLORED FURS

Furs are going in for color to a really astonishing degree. Fox and ermine are appearing in the most unexpected colors, such as rose, pink, yellow, blue, violet and grape. Even red fur is to be found, and bright red at that.

FUR SLEEVES

Fabric coats with entire sleeves of fur are very new and the fur is handled like fabric so that it does not look at all clumsy. The fabric extends over the shoulder line in epaulets and the fur sleeves are tucked up underneath and then continue downward.

FUR JACKETS

Jackets of all descriptions are stressing the three-quarter length and the waistline jacket had to do something radical to get even a look in. So it sacrificed sleeves to become important. The sleeveless fur jacket is important for wear with woolen dresses and give just enough warmth early in the fall to go coatless. They are made of flat fur, such as kid, broadtail, mole or nutria—and are not a bit bulky, so you can wear them under winter coats and defy the coldest weather.

FUR TRIMMINGS

The precious furs such as mink, sable, silver fox, Persian lamb are doing their elegant best for sumptuous fur collars but the tremendous importance of fur bands for armhole circlets, epaulets and border trimming has brought the relatively unprecious furs into the limelight. "Skin cuttings" of precious furs are being converted into bands and the lowly little animals are coming up in the world. Mole, American broadtail, chinchilla-marked hair susliki, karanduki are "banding" together for an important place in the fashion picture.

Elegance Is the Keynote of New Jewelry

Jewelry for Fall and Winter Reflects the Edwardian Influence for Formal Wear

It is true that "All is not gold that glitters"—but why worry when the Midas touch is possible in simulated gold jewelry that depends upon design and smartness rather than intrinsic value.

All the world is talking "gold values" and the fashion world also puts a premium on the gleaming metal. Jewelry for fall and winter is not worth its weight in gold, strictly speaking, but it carries a lot of weight, nevertheless.

Huge gold bracelets (whether real or simulated) will imprison the smartest wrists, and will be worn below coat sleeves and over top of gloves for daytime.

Gold necklaces that lie flat, and follow the natural line at the base of the throat, may resemble a circlet of ancient coins, or start off quite simply with a modest link chain that bursts into cascades of little pendants to form a delicate fringe in the centre.

LARGE JEWELS IMPORTANT

"The bigger the better" is the rule for fall and winter jewelry—which may prove to be a snare and a delusion for the unwary. Nothing could be worse than a huge, cheap, gaudy piece of jewelry. If necessary, have just one shining gem, but do be sure it is of "purest ray serene."

JEWELER COPIES

All of which does not mean that three carat diamonds or square cut emeralds are essential to your peace of mind. Delicate mountings in the best jeweler craft tradition are now available in moderately priced simulated precious stone jewelry. The brilliance of the stones and the fine workmanship make these pieces things of beauty that are not offensive to good taste.

HEIRLOOM JEWELS

However, for the woman who cannot pay diamond prices, and has inhibitions about "imitations," white sapphires and white zircons in finely wrought sterling silver mounts are heirloom treasures of authentic value.

CLASSIC PEARLS

Simulated pearls are now works of art that practically defy detection, except upon close examination. Very cheap simulated pearls, of course, look "waxy" and peel off in no time at all. A few dollars buy a really good imitation, evenly matched, and with a sterling silver or white gold clasp.

The cultured pearl is a genuine pearl, produced by introducing a foreign particle into the oyster shell, such as a tiny piece of mother-of-pearl. The irritation thus commenced is counteracted by a protective covering which in time becomes a pearl. It is a lengthy process and a really staggering number of years are necessary to the final production of a finely matched string of cultured pearls. It takes 333 oysters nine years to produce one perfect pearl. For a necklace of 148 pearls it takes 45,000 oysters nine years.

Pearls are perfect complements to the elegant fabrics for fall and beautiful jewels play an important part in the new version of Edwardian elegance which is influencing evening fashions.

Fall and Winter Shoes Put Their Best Foot Forward

Perforations, Buckles and Buttons Add Decorative Interest

HIGH CUT IMPORTANT

The trend is toward high cut, riding up over the instep, and giving the foot maximum support.

The classic opera in a formal trimmed version.

The oxford, therefore, takes an important place in the fall and winter fashion picture. Four eyelet oxfords are smart, comfortable, and the ideal choice for all around satisfaction. Oxfords count their smartness in terms of eyelets, however, and the five eyelet versions climb just that much higher over the instep to accentuate the smart high cut silhouette.

The monk type shoes is particularly well adapted to the high cut line, and is showing off its parlor manners by appearing in soft kid, with graceful feminine heels. This is an innovation, as the monk type shoes is usually associated with heavy leathers and an outdoor temperament.

The T-strap has everything to insure its fashion rightness. Vamps are cut high to follow the new line, and the T-strap carries well up over the instep. T-straps slim the line of the foot, are dressy without being too formal, and are a flattering addition to any shoe wardrobe.

Step-in pumps are synonymous with high cut and so just naturally fall in step with the new fashions.

The opera pump appears to go on forever, and is an ageless favorite. The classic, simple lines achieve beauty, whether fashion decrees trimming or plainness. This versatile, popular fashion, therefore, needs only a bit of trimming up to continue following in the smartest footsteps for fall and winter.

TRIMMINGS AND DETAIL

Rounder toes follow through from important summer trends, but the "stubby" look is taboo. Trimming detail is cleverly used to shorten the appearance of the foot, and the slightly rounded toes does its bit in the same direction. The result is the foot looks smaller, without the necessity of trying to convince worried shoe salesmen that you really can wear a half size shorter than nature intended you to wear. Vanity must suffer but not with foot troubles this year.

Fine detail opens a wide field for individualized shoe fashions. Perforations are growing bigger and bolder, punching sizable holes to define tips and boxing detail. Kid underlay will keep out the cold and at the same time furnish a color contrast. Beige underlay for brown, and gray underlay for black have interesting possibilities, with just enough contrast to relieve the monotony, without looking two-tone.

Buttons add a Colonial touch, when placed high on the instep and paired off two on each side. This type of trimming is most evident in the monk type shoe and step-in pumps.

Buckles continue to add ornament to one-straps, and are at their best in silver finish on suede shoes.

Enamel finish hooks, reminiscent of little brother's laced shoes, are a novelty which has been introduced to hold the lacings on big sister's oxfords—providing she is young enough to enjoy exciting a bit of rather startled interest.

A more conservative means of adding new interest to oxfords is possible in the choice of lacings. The cord type is a change from the flat lace and adds quite a different appearance. Laces are also going in for gay tippings, in metal or composition.

COLOR IMPORTANCE

The heaviest betting is on black, brown is a close second. Black and brown are usually the leading shoe colors for fall and winter, being practical and conservative. They divide themselves into lesser or greater importance, according to the predominating costume color groups each season.

It is the shoe colors beside black and brown that are the exciting news. Gray and taupe show signs of being very important. Gray combined with black is very, very smart and ties up with the continued fashion importance of gray as a costume color. The all-gray shoe is cited for interest, but is not practical for general wear. The black shoe combined with gray is a happy compromise that is both practical and color conscious.

Achievement And Modern Eyeglasses

Achievement! Therein lies the keener joy in living. To strive to do things well and to succeed is a splendid goal in work and play. There is a fine joyousness in unhandicapped competition on a par with our peers. Without normal eyesight, all activities require a terrible struggle in competition with those who are better equipped.

The pace of modern living demands much of our eyes. We begin the day reading newspapers in lurching vehicles on the way to work. We end the day by spending several hours in an intensely dark theatre, watching pictures and words weave a moving story on the screen. The hours between are occupied using our eyes in artificial light, at close, detailed work, intensely watching a fast game, or concentrating on cards. This is the price we pay for our learning, livelihood and leisure. If it impairs our sight, the cost is too high. We must protect and save our vision by frequent eye examinations and proper glasses.

To-day's smart style in eyewear accents rimless spectacles. Lenses are available in shapes, each designed to be becoming to certain faces. It is well to remember that to be in style, eyewear should be appropriate to the occasion and the costume. To-day's glasses are designed for street and daily wear—for reading and study—for sports—or for evening wear. Gone are the days of the little crescent-shaped eyeglasses that grandmother used. The tiny oval lenses that old Aunt Emily pushed up on her forehead or down on the tip of her nose are equally passe.

Modern eyewear is more than a smart style to-day. It is an adornment, beautiful in itself, that adds to one's charm. Modern eyewear is inconspicuous. The lenses give unobstructed, normal vision; and the eyes are left beautiful as nature made them. Modern lenses are less likely to suffer breakage. Modern processes anneal the glasses properly and the recent development of a method for mounting rimless lenses without screws further reduces possibility of breakage. Modern eyewear may be had in a great variety of lens shapes. This permits the expert who fits your glasses to select the types most becoming to your own facial characteristics.

Everyone needs two or more pairs of glasses. Why not have your extra pairs made in styles which are appropriate to your mode of living?

Modern optical science is built on a foundation of knowledge and experience that spans the centuries. The glasses that you wear to-day did not just "happen." They are the result of numberless years of research by men whose names illumine the pages of scientific achievement.

[illegible] place in which to live, because of the great men who have used glasses to extend their usefulness. Think of the potential heroes, leaders and men of genius who have lived and died without accomplishment or recognition of their powers, because defective eyesight stole their chance to be great!

ARE YOUR GLASSES "Old-fashioned?"

IF YOU'RE wearing old-time glasses with the heavy cumbersome shell frames, perhaps more than the frame itself is out-of-date. You may have outgrown the lenses—they may be harming instead of helping your eyes. A careful examination will reveal the true condition, and it may help your vision greatly.

Elegant Evening Fashions Reflect New Revival of the Edwardian Influence

Old World Glamour Adds New Interest to Formal Fashions

The new silhouette; shoulder width is repeated in the hemline in this white satin sheath gown.

Formal fashions are becoming increasingly formal. The casual mood has turned serious and very much the grand lady.

Hemlines that flare outward give a delightful illusion of lovely ladies gliding rather than walking. Trains and trailing back draperies are reminiscent of colorful court scenes and have an Old World glamour.

You can be seductively frilly and very, very feminine; or stately and very, very grand for this formal season but [illegible] must be

THE SILHOUETTE

Between shoulders and knees, fashion wraps you in a molded sheath with classic, simple line unbroken by belt or ornament. The Princess silhouette would best describe it, but there is a subtle difference hard to define.

You appear to have been literally poured in this sheath silhouette, but at the shoulders and below the knees the measure of chic bubbles over with enthusiasm. Widened shoulders persist for evening wear as well as for daytime fashions. Hemlines swirl outward below the knees or jut outward in a broken line, with godets, set-in triangles or uneven points to balance the shoulder width at the hemline.

RUMBA RUFFLES

The cascades of ruffles placed below the knee, that swirl and zoom in the graceful rhythm of the Creole Rumba are adding their seductive allure to new evening fashions.

Fashions Present Mode in Miniature

Princess Elizabeth continues to influence classic little girl fashions with a Kemp tweed coat shaped in at the waistline and strictly tailored with velveteen trimmings. A brimmed hat with velveteen trimming to match completes the ensemble.

Coats in the English manner have long been a favorite with their cousins across the sea. Trim lines, careful tailoring and sturdy fabrics are three fundamentals of a practical coat for the active school girl. The English fashions that have found favor here embrace all three of these virtues, plus an ability to cope with all kinds of weather. The sailor coat, cut after the English fashion, has a matching hat and had an eye on English winters in the making. The red flannel lining, however, is no less appropriate here "when the north wind shall blow and we shall have snow."

And so the English influence continues to be felt in important girl coat fashions for fall and winter. However, young folks have not deserted the army and navy. The regulation coat with brass buttons, sleeve chevrons and a sea-going air is a perennial classic that has lost none of its jaunty importance. It has proven its practical, wearable qualities and deserves to continue as the backbone of coat wardrobes.

The military influence is apparent in smart tweed coats with notched collars and belted waistlines in the best army tradition.

The Balmacaan has no impressive origin, but it is an ageless favorite that endures. Balmacaans in mixture woolens are ready to stand any amount of wear and tear. Leather buttons add to the general air of ruggedness. And with a hat to match, the tout ensemble takes a new lease on life and is ready to rough it and be very little the worse for wear.

FOR TWO TO SIXERS

For kindergartens and young hopefuls up to six years, three-piece outfits are the accepted, practical trio. Coat, leggings and hat to match assure an appearance of harmony and put-togetherness. New interest, however, is introduced in brimmed hats instead of the usual cloches. This innovation has much in its favor, as wide brims have a way of adding piquancy to stray curls.

ENSEMBLES FOR OLDER GIRLS

Two-piece sets for the older girl, graduate from the leggings class. The two pieces are a coat and matching muff. The muff has its practical value on frosty days and is a real stimulant for dignified, lady-like deportment.

THE APPROVED SILHOUETTE

The fashion story of the new silhouette for all ages commences at the waist and extends upward and outward toward the shoulders. Girls' fashions enthusiastically fall in line with squared shoulders that are trig but not exaggerated. Square epaulets are new and smart. Detail of extended pieces ending in points go up in the world of fashion by achieving height as well as width.

Softer Curls Trend For Fall

"Venturing a guess as to what the trend of coiffure styles will be this fall may be difficult," remarked a prominent Canadian hairdresser, "but my idea is that we shall all be striving for softer effects.

The "slicked-back" style, so prominent this summer, has been very popular and very effective. It seemed to suit the hot weather muslins, sports hats, and schoolgirl figures. Very often one style grows out of another. Whatever the vogue for fall will be, I feel that the hair slicked back straight from the forehead, as it has been, will get us definitely away from the harsher deep set waves to softer waves and softer curls."

Blouses Grow Longer for Wear With Three-quarter Jackets

Tunic Blouses Add New Interest and Satin Appears Again

Suits for fall and winter favor the three-quarter jacket and fall into two groups—the formal suit, particularly smart in black, and the tweed suit for town or spectator sports wear.

The longer suit jackets influence the longer line for blouses. Blouses accordingly are longer than they have been for several seasons. They often extend five or six inches below the waistline.

The smartest blouses look almost like jackets, and give a more complete ensemble appearance when worn without the suit coat. The silhouette is predominantly slim and belted, or, if unbelted, tucks and gores define the high waistline and the hipline is smoothly molded. Buttons all the way down the front and high necklines with turndown collars are smartly tailored details.

Two new blouses accenting shoulder width. At the left, a dark satin blouse with high cut yoke and cowl neckline; at the right, a silk crepe blouse with high turndown collar and a jabot. Note how both these blouses achieve a molded, fitted hipline.

THE TUNIC BLOUSE

The tunic blouse comes into its own for fall and winter and offers many exciting possibilities. Tailored tunic blouses make a skirt into a dress, and tunic blouses of satin worn with wool achieve a smart fabric contrast and have a formal feeling. Velvet or metallic thread material devised into tunics in a really grand manner is a practical expression of the theatre and Sunday night ensemble. The practical feature is that the skirt may be worn with daytime blouses and do double duty.

SATIN FOR BLOUSES

Satin has invaded the fashion picture very thoroughly. Satin for evening, daytime and afternoon frocks is of major importance. Matched accessories of satin are smarter than smart. Satin hats and satin shoes complete the smooth satin line from head to foot, and even undies demand satin.

And so satin features importantly for both suit blouses and costume blouses. Neutral shades that blend with suit colorings take on new life in the gleaming surface interest. However, there are many exciting possibilities for color contrast. Satin blouses in all shades of green, bright or dark, and rich vintage reds have a glowing beauty hard to resist. Pansy blue is a gorgeous shade, really, and at its best in elegant satin.

Sheer woolens and ribbed crepes are also a smart choice and less formal for wear with tweeds.

NECKLINES

Necklines continue to cover collar bones, and in fact are even higher for fall, and hug the throat. High cowl necklines are a wise choice for formal blouses. They are very smart and very flattering. Tiny roll collars that fit snugly are very young looking and almost quaint.

Where East Meets West

East is east and west is west and never the twain shall meet does not apply to current millinery fashions. Paris couturiers have borrowed significant trends from the Chinese coolie hat, with its built-up height and peaked appearance.

The stepped-up architectural lines adapt themselves to a modern feeling without losing their Oriental origin.

Satin and velvet, both very important for fall, are at their best in gleaming black. The Chinese influence, however, is far from sombre, and the black background becomes a foil for color accent.

Delicate feathers in exotic tropical colors carry the eye interest upward, when placed at just the right tilted angle. An illusion of height is fashion's pet trick of the moment, and high placed trimmings as the focal point of interest achieve the pinnacle of smartness.

Fabric Gloves for Fall Have Style Interest in New Materials

Cotton gloves continue to keep their fashion importance well in hand. Cottons with a silky finish and cottons with a woolly finish are important. Weave and color add newness, such as waffle weaves and geometrics. Black, gray, brown and beige are leading colors. Piping for contrast is smart, but it is smartest when applied sparingly.

LUXURY MATERIALS INVADE GLOVE FASHIONS

Satin, Lastex satin and knitted velvets are very formal in four, eight or even ten-button slipons. Shirrings of elastic threads at the wrist insure a smooth, trim fit. Black is the most important color for this type glove, which is not surprising, as black satin is a fashion leader. However, pinks and blues and browns are to be found for color accent or to match evening gowns.

Chamoisette type gloves are perfect complements to sports type costumes in plain bright or rich colors for wear with tweeds or dark monotones. Slipon gloves for tailored wear are much trimmer than novelty types. Hand stitching to match the costume color is an effective ensemble detail.

Woolen gloves have practical appeal for frosty days and come in grand colors, such as currant or dull greens. Beige stitching adds a new touch. These new woolen gloves are more tailored than the usual heavy "winter sports" gloves and are appropriate for motoring and country wear as well as sports.

The squared off shoulders of the new silhouette has influenced glove cuffs, which are also smartly squared and have a trim and tailored look with tucked and button detail. Dressier gloves square their cuffs, too, but with frilly edges of contrasting fabric such as taffeta.

A Few Lines About Lines

Necklines have been creeping up on us, and the current trend toward fashions of the 1900's reminiscent of the boned "choker" collar is responsible for the standing collar.

The modern version of the standing collar is a "collar" in name only—upstanding bands of braid, fur or folds of fabric reach across from shoulder to shoulder, and do their fencing with necklines merely as a foil to accentuate shoulder width.

CURVED LINES

"Curved is the line of beauty"—and scalloped detail shows the curve of beauty for new gloves.

Scallop outlines in the shape of cuffs may require just two big scallops to complete their smartness, or may go in for a long line of little scallops. Scallops are not confined to cuffs, however. They also furnish stitching motifs for up and down the back of the glove in rippling color contrasts.

DROPPED SHOULDER LINES

Dropped shoulder lines for evening, baring the shoulders yet covering the upper arm, are very courtly and formal in feeling. The "sleeve" is achieved by puffs or folds which give a broadened line in keeping with the square shoulder silhouette. Narrow shoulder straps enhance the bared shoulder effect which is very feminine and flattering.

Sharpen dulled Appetites! Improve Digestion with

DON'T LET COMMON CONSTIPATION DULL THE JOY OF LIVING

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brings Relief

Constipation takes the sunshine out of your days. It may bring headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness, sallow skins, pimples. If neglected, it can seriously impair health.

Fortunately, you can avoid this condition by eating a delicious cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides two things needed to overcome common constipation: "bulk" and vitamin B. ALL-BRAN is also a rich source of blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears out the intestinal wastes.

How much better than dosing yourself with patent medicines. Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. With each meal in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

NANAIMO NOTES

The regular monthly meeting of the local council of women was held Monday afternoon. Arrangements were completed for the council day tea, at the home of Mrs. C. J. Trawford, Newcastle Townsite, on September 27. Mrs. A. C. Bagley, Vancouver, provincial president, has signified her intention of being present to open the event. The relief camp at Sooke has been allotted by the British Columbia government and the Provincial Council of Women to Nanaimo L.C.W., to come under the national council scheme to provide comforts and amusements for men in relief camps. A general appeal will be made to the residents of Nanaimo to contribute cigarettes and comforts for the camps. Following the regular business, the council was addressed by Dr. Drysdale on sterilization of the mentally unfit.

Garden City

The monthly meeting of the Garden City Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Reid, Balfour Avenue, last week, with a good attendance of members.

The devotional period was taken by the president, Mrs. Perry. Mrs. W. P. Brown and Mrs. James. Heralds were read by the members. Miss Sangster gave a three-minute talk on "Temperance." A letter on mission work was read by Mrs. J. Brown. Mrs. Allan rendered a beautiful solo, "The Shepherd." The quarterly report on the allocation of money was given by Mrs. Raynor.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served by the hostess.

Duncan, Sept. 20.—An inquest will be held this evening by Dr. H. P. Swan, coroner, over the body of Zinsuku Narabu, a Japanese, who was killed at the Mayo camp at 8 o'clock on Monday morning.

ROSE—In sacred and loving memory of our darling little daughter, Dorothy (Dolly), aged nine years, who passed away on September 20, 1929. Sadly missed by her daddy, mummie and brother Jackie, 938 Fullerton Ave., Victoria.

Dear Saviour, fold her in Thy arms
And let her ever be
A messenger of love between
Our human hearts and Thee

She was a flower, too fair for earth,
Sent here but for a while;
God marked her when He gave her birth
And took her with a smile.

FILM RECORDED CHIVALROUS ACT

News Reel Shows "Enemy" Dropping Flowers From Air During Ace's Funeral

Canadian Press

Stockholm, Sept. 20.—A news film record of an act of "enemy" chivalry performed fifteen years ago at the funeral of the famous German flying ace, Manfred von Richthofen, was recently found with the aid of the Swedish film industry, according to an article in the periodical "Swedish School and Educational Film," edited by the "Svensk Filmindustri," Sweden's leading film company.

Baroness von Richthofen, mother of the now almost legendary flying hero, has established a Richthofen museum to honor the memory of her son. She heard recently that a news film picture had been shown in 1918 in Stockholm, recording how a squadron of British aviators threw flowers from the air during the funeral of their brave adversary. The baroness wished a copy of this film for her museum, and requested the Swedes to do their utmost to find it for her.

The London representative of the Swedish company was instructed to do his best to locate the print and finally succeeded in finding the negative in the archives of the British military authorities. They at once chivalrously consented to place a copy at the disposal of the baroness, who was very happy at this valuable addition to her collection of mementoes of her famous son.

MAN KILLED IN HIGHWAY CRASH

Canadian Press

Regina, Sept. 20.—One man was killed and six other persons injured in two highway crashes in the Regina district last night.

Blinded by the headlights of another car, R. S. Yeoman Abbington, III., returning home from his farm at Eston, Sask., crashed his auto into the rear of a farm wagon, overturning it and causing fatal injuries to the driver, Mike Nowak, twenty-six. Yeoman, his wife and five children escaped injury.

Six people were injured, three seriously enough to be detained in hospital, when two autos crashed head-on near here.

Try to Move Banks To Aid Recovery

Washington, Sept. 20.—The worries here are concentrating more and more on the banks. If the NRA is to succeed, bank credits must be loosened. Industries need credit to carry them through the initial period of higher labor costs. General Johnson has announced that special efforts will be made to get the banks in on the play. But bank credits are showing no increase.

Banks are still cautious in making loans, but another important factor involving uncertainty has appeared. For two or three years many of them have been carrying part of their assets, especially securities and "flow" loans at fictitious values. Examiners have okayed this. If these assets had to be written down now the banks holding them would appear in an impaired position.

To enter the new Depositors' Insurance Corporation, banks not members of the Federal Reserve mut be certified for solvency by the first of the year. Federal Reserve and national banks enter automatically, but must be certified for solvency by July.

So there's tremendous interest in the official requirements for solvency.

NOTED CONDUCTOR UNLIKE MUSICIAN

Jose Iturbi, Pianist-conductor, Likes to Box and Go On Late Parties

New York, Sept. 15.—This Jose Iturbi, Spanish pianist-conductor who has taken Mexico and New York by the ears, looks and acts so little like a musician that he sometimes has trouble getting past the doorman at his own concerts. He is thirty-eight now and calming down a little, but he still likes to box and drive the fastest cars and go on late parties.

All his managers have had a chronic case of jitters because of what boxing is likely to do to his hands. Iturbi just laughs and says that he always wanted to be a conductor anyway, and that a broken fist wouldn't keep him from holding a baton.

He had a rather unorthodox beginning for a great artist—spent most of his youth playing in movie houses and cafes in Switzerland. At twenty he got a job playing in a hotel in Zurich, where he attracted so much attention that the Conservatory of Geneva offered him a job on his piano faculty. Iturbi had little formal instruction, so he didn't know much about teaching at first, but he stayed six years. . .

Iturbi is breathlessly enthusiastic about jazz music and spends occasional evenings in Harlem when he is town. A French concern makes a special perfume for his use, and anybody who sneers about it is likely to get a poke in the eye.

A REAL "PLAY" BOY

When Iturbi was here first in 1929 he was taken up by the Kahns, the Adolf Lewisohns and others of the high-hat musical crowd. But he didn't enjoy them much because when he isn't playing he doesn't like to talk about music, just wants to be gay.

BENJAMIN ACKERMAN DIES

Peterborough, Ont., Sept. 20.—Benjamin F. Ackerman, sixty-two, president of the B. F. Ackerman, Son & Co. Ltd., harness, boot and shoemakers, died to-day. He was well known in western Canada, where he built a large factory and warehouse at Regina soon after the war.

ATLIN LIBERAL BATTLE OPENS

Mr. Pattullo Hailed as Only Real Political Leader in Province

Stewart, B.C., Sept. 19.—T. D. Pattullo, Liberal leader, gave his best fighting form in addressing a large meeting here Monday evening, it being the opening gun in a whirlwind speaking campaign which will take the Leader of the Opposition all through the province before election day.

The meeting was in the interests of W. J. Asselstine, mill superintendent of the Premier Mine and Liberal candidate in Atlin riding.

ACTION

Mr. Pattullo's speech was constructive throughout. He spent no time on his particular opponents but devoted forty-five minutes to a rapid-fire review of Liberal policy, pledging immediate action in the interests of all the people. The Liberal policy, he stated, was not a thing of glittering generalities adopted hurriedly in an effort to please but was the result of earnest thought in which liberally-minded persons throughout the province had been consulted, openly arrived at in the largest and most representative political convention the province had ever seen. The Liberal platform suggested sane, progressive and immediate action on all the major problems facing the country.

"The greatest of all our problems is that of employment of our citizens," the Liberal leader declared. He would, if returned to power, at once appoint an advisory economic council of experts in all lines of endeavor, recommended by the interests which they represented, to study and advise upon every phase of community life. Necessary public undertaking should be carried forward vigorously now in order that the citizens should be restored to gainful activity.

Freedom of members of the Legislature to vote upon public measures as they saw fit "without heed to the crack of the party whip," was an essential plank of the Liberal platform, Mr. Pattullo asserted. Broad measures to rationalize the educational system to make fairer the relation of provincial and municipal governments and to remove the anomalies of the present taxation policy were provided for in the Liberal platform.

W. J. Asselstine, the Liberal candidate, welcomed Mr. Pattullo as "the only real political leader in the province."

Major S. F. M. Moodie, provincial Liberal organizer, analyzed the present political situation. H. B. Campbell was chairman.

Holly and Flowers Also Go On Code

Washington, Sept. 20.—Christmas is coming! The preserved foliage and wreath industry, filing a code, asks a normal 40-hour week with a 48-hour week and maximum nine-hour day for the peak period from September 1 to December 20.

Also, it seems appropriate that little red-headed Rose Schneiderman, only woman member of the Labor Advisory Board, should be named L. A. B. adviser on the codes for both the artificial flowers and feathers industry and the women's belt industry.

MUSIC APLENTY IN "LET'S GO"

Varied Entertainment at Royal Victoria on Friday Will Aid Rugby Player

Victoria talent has produced many fine performances, ranging from classical music to comedy farce and light opera; but never before has any programme combined the sublime and the ridiculous in such a riot of fast moving entertainment as that offered by "Let's Go" the mammoth musical revue to be staged at the Royal Victoria Theatre, Friday evening.

Sponsored by The Canadian Scottish Regiment this is in the form of a benefit performance, all proceeds going to aid of Johnny Rowland, injured Rugby player. In response to the call for talent the best in Victoria musical and theatrical circles volunteered, with the result that over 100 persons will appear in the carefully selected cast, giving the assurance of two hours of varied entertainment that will know no dull moment from one end of the programme to the other.

E. P. Oppenheim Story Coming to Dominion

An interesting double feature programme will be presented at the Dominion Theatre for three days, commencing to-morrow, "Midnight Club" from E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel will have such leading stars as Clive Brook, George Raft, Alison Skipworth and Helen Vinson. "Three-cornered Moon" will star Claudette Colbert, Richard Arlen and Mary Boland.

PLAYHOUSE THEATRE

Just as Constance Bennett revealed the world of the screen in "What Price Hollywood?" so does she reveal the intimate side of the New York theatrical world in RKO-Pathe Pictures' "Rockabye," now at the Playhouse Theatre.

"Rockabye," which marks a complete departure for Miss Bennett, inasmuch as she plays her first tragic role, is heralded as one of the most powerful dramas of 1932.

SELLS BRACELETS FOR CAULIFLOWER

Morocco Cook So Adored Author and His Wife She Would Make Any Sacrifice

New York, Sept. 15.—This is a rather belated note about the bank holiday, but Mr. Ben Lucien Burman, the writer, has just arrived with it from the interior of Morocco. That is the country where Burman goes when he wants to write a novel about life along the Mississippi river. Some day he thinks he will go down on the Mississippi and do a story about Morocco. . . . .

Anyway, he and his wife, who illustrates his books under the name of Alice Caddy, were established in a $12-a-month mansion in Marrakeesh. They had an assortment of $2-a-month servants and a gem of a cook named Zahoura who looked after the Burmans constantly and swore she would kill any assistant they tried to hire for her. Burman, who abhors radios, but isn't disturbed by the throbbing of native drums or the sniping of Riff riflemen, had settled to his job of polishing off his new novel, "Steamboat Round the Bend." And everything was dandy. . . . .

Then came news of the American bank holiday. Money had been hard enough to get before, requiring a 150-mile ride to the coast. But now it couldn't be had at all. Local Arabs began to gossip about the once-rich visitor who no longer tossed pennies to the beggars in the marketplace . . .

Zahoura was equal to the occasion, though always managing to buy food on credit from the tradesmen who knew her. One day Mrs. Burman told her to have cauliflower for supper that evening. As Zahoura returned from market, the Burmans noticed that her two solid silver bracelets were missing. Which was strange, because the cook was fonder of those bracelets than anything else in the world except— as it developed—her master and mistress.

Zahoura explained very simply that she had been told to get cauliflower, but that none of the merchants she knew had cauliflower. Merchants in another part of the town had cauliflower, but one who has no money cannot buy cauliflower from a strange merchant. So she had traded the silver bracelets for a nice fresh head of cauliflower, and she would cook it at once for the supper.

Zahoura was an excellent cook, but somehow the Burmans did'nt enjoy that cauliflower very much. Happily, though, word came next day that the banks had opened in America, so Zahours soon was wearing her bracelets again.

Just as a fisherman can become sentimentally attached to a supple rod, or a golfer to a favorite iron, so can an oarsman have an affection for a tried and trusty oar. Take the case of Cy Weed, for example. About two decades ago he was the famous stroke of the Cornell crew, and when he left college he took with him the graceful length of ash with which he had won, or helped to win, many a race.

Weed came to New York, shipping the oar along. Like most New Yorkers he has moved rather often, but each time he does it is not so much a question of the general desirability of the new place as it is whether the oar can be gotten into it. The problem usually is solved only when Mr. Weed returns to his previous home, gets the oar and carries it through the streets, manoeuvres it upstairs and around corners, and finally into its acknowledged place of honor in the living-room.

Then there is a story about a pole. It is twenty feet long; accupying a narrow box covered with addresses and shipping labels, and is kept in a warehouse on Fifty-second street. It was used once by two brothers in an acrobatic act. One brother balanced the pole on his shoulder and the other brother climbed to the top of it and did tricks.

Well, something went wrong one day and the aerialist fell and was killed. The surviving brother never used the pole again, yet he wasn't willing to dispose of it. The thing to him was a symbol of many happy years, and of whatever degree of fame it is that acrobats attain. So he sent it to the warehouse and has paid storage charges on it year after year. He's still a performer, and has another partner now. But whenever he is in town he goes alone to the warehouse, opens the long, narrow box and looks inside. Just looks for a few moments, then closes the box gently and goes away.

CAPITOL THEATRE

Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery star in "Tugboat Annie," at the Capitol Theatre.

In the new picture, Miss Dressler recreates the famous character of Norman Reilly Raine's Saturday Evening Post stories. She wears, in several sequences, a hat with an absurd feather in it.

DOMINION THEATRE

It took Minor Watson twelve years to get on Broadway.

As a stock company actor, Watson saved up his wages every year for twelve seasons and tried to get a job on Broadway. Broke, he always returned to stock.

Watson's latest role is with Helen Hayes and Robert Montgomery in "Another Language," which is playing at the Dominion Theatre. The new picture was directed for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Edward H. Griffith with the cast including Louise Closser Hale; John Beale and Henry Travers.

EMPIRE THEATRE

Flora Robson, the well-known British stage actress, appears in the role of Julia Skene in the Paramount British picture, "One Precious Year," a Temple Thurston subject, directed by Henry Edwards, showing at the Empire Theatre.

Miss Robson was born in Durham, and was educated in London. She made her first appearance on the stage in 1907, at the age of five.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

W. C. Fields, veteran stage and screen star, is featured in the leading role in Paramount's widely-heralded musical comedy, "International House," which is at the Columbia Theatre. Peggy Hopkins Joyce, international beauty and stage favorite, makes her talking picture debut in a prominent part. Sari Maritza has the ingenue lead, and Stuart Edwin the juvenile lead.

SAYS JUANITA WAS GOOD BOAT

The cruiser Juanita, which came to grief on her carrier last summer at Shoal Bay where Capt. W. A. Pomeroy beached her, when, as he testified, he found her filling with water while passing through Trial Island channel, was a perfectly good boat up until that time, according to Captain Richard S. Johnson, R.N.R.

Capt. Johnson testified in court before Judge Lampman where Capt. Pomeroy and Jean McAndrew Dunegan are suing Eugene Robert Johnson for the return of the money paid for the purchase of the Juanita and the cancellation of their agreement with him. When the cruiser was beached, she was on her first run under the new owners. This was from Canoe Cove, north of Sidney, to Victoria, from where she was to start out on commercial work on the West Coast.

Capt. Johnson, who was called by Gerald Sedger, defence counsel, testified that the Juanita had been out with fourteen passengers just before she was sold and had proved herself seaworthy in every way. As further evidence of her seaworthiness, he told the court how the cruiser last winter outrode the storm that smashed in the concrete Dallas Road sea wall at Ross Bay. He also testified that the rending of the timbers of the hull and their breaking away from the stern post was caused by the damage done to the vessel when Capt. Pomeroy and his engineer, George Clark, ran her ashore. He said the pounding and strain would have loosened the construction.

Judge Lampman adjourned the case to resume it next Monday morning.

IS IT TRUE?

That the term "thug," meaning a murderous assailant, originated in the United States?

Ans. No. "Thugs" was a name given to a secret organization in India in 1810, who sacrificed human victims to their gods.

But it is true that a box of Stevenson's delicious Hoe-Maid Victoria Chocolates is the gift supreme for all occasions. They are The Kind She Likes.

Is it true that the term "bull," meaning an exaggerated questionable statement had its origin in the Spanish bull ring? Answer will appear Friday.

LIBERALS STILL FLY OWN COLORS

Other Parties Disappear, Says President of Ward Five, Saanich

"The Liberal Party is the only party sailing under its own colors. The old Conservative Party has abdicated, and as conglomeration of Unionist, Independent, now partizan-group is endeavoring to fill the vacated position. The C.C.F. is an aggregation of groups united in attack, but with all the elements of disintegration if ever power was attained," stated President N. McGillivray at the annual meeting of Ward Five Saanich Liberal Asaociation, held at Royal Oak last night.

The following officers were elected: President, N. McGillivray; vice-president, P. M. Monckton; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. W. Allison; executive, Mrs. F. Reeves, Mrs. G. H. Cummings, Mrs. P. M. Monckton, Messrs. J. L. Swales, W. Allison, T. F. Singleton, W. Heal, H. Thompson, C. A. Hersey and W. Kinnaird.

Norman W. Whittaker, Liberal candidate in Saanich, and David Ramsay, campaign manager, spoke briefly. Mr. Whittaker said it was not necessary to attack the present administration. The striking fact was that during all the years since Confederation, a provincial debt of $104,000,000 had been accumulated, yet in the five years of the present administration the debt had been increased to $159,000,000. Allowing $9,000,000 for unemployment expenditure, the increase amounted to the stupendous sum of $46,000,000. That in itself was enough to prove the imperative need for the people of British Columbia to get rid of the Tolmie government, Mr. Whittaker said.

MINISTER GIVES REPLY TO CITY

Little hope of any change in the decision of the Dominion Department of Public Works to move their offices from Victoria to Vancouver was held out in a telegram from Hon. H. A. Stewart, the minister, replying to a protest from the City Council.

The mayor wired the minister, following the last meeting of the council when a resolution of protest was passed. The minister replied yesterday as follows:

"In reply, may I state that before the department decided to consolidate engineering services in British Columbia and replace three existing offices by one office in Vancouver, matter of various works and requirements on Vancouver Island was given most careful consideration. You may rest assured that every attention will be given in various works and requirements of department on the island and that every interest will be fully protected."

To conduct three trials and to hear three naturalization applications at the courthouse in Duncan, Judge Lampman went up the island to-day.

MAYOR TO OPEN HEADQUARTERS

With short simple ceremonies, Mayor Leeming will officially open the new headquarters of the Tuberculous Veterans Branch, Post 18, British Empire Service League, at 813 Blanshard Street, at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon in the presence of the donors, officers and members of the branch and of other legion branches, the ladies' auxiliary, officers of the provincial and of city and district chapters, I.O.D.E., representatives of the nursing staffs of the Jubilee and St. Joseph's hospitals, fraternal lodges, the church and others. Following the ceremony and a tour of inspection, afternoon tea will be served free by the ladies' auxiliary.

Opening of these fine new headquarters will mark the realization of a dream long entertained by the branch, but repeatedly shelved in favor of the more pressing problems of helping tuberculous veterans and their dependents from month to month. It was a dream to own its own home and to offer a place of retreat and rest to tuberculous veterans so long as any exist in the city, and thereafter to will it to some organization interested in carrying it on for the benefit of those similarly incapacitated in civil life.

Realization of the dream has been made possible very largely by the generosity of local men and women, who assisted with gifts of money and material. As a result, the new headquarters were acquired, somewhat remodelled and entirely redecorated and furnished, with the more able members volunteering their labor in the lighter work of redecoration and the ladies' auxiliary assisting with the furnishings. While title to the property is not yet entirely unencumbered, the progress made has lightened the branch's financial burden and paved the way for absolute ownership.

The facilities offered by the new home are admirably adapted to the business and recreational activities of the branch.

A comfortably furnished library and sitting-room, decorated in cream and old rose floral wall and floor covering designs, contains 1,500 volumes of popular fiction and biography, magazines and newspapers. It is also equipped with a handsome radio set, writing and card tables. A large kitchen, a bathroom and various store rooms are other conveniences available, as well as a secretary's office and a general meeting room.

There passed away at the Jubilee Hospital this morning, Richard Merritt, in his seventy-second year. He was born in Yorkshire, England, and had resided in this city for the last forty-five years. Funeral announcements will be made later.

The regular meeting of the Trades and Labor Council will be held this evening in the Labor Hall, corner of Government and Broughton Streets. Minor business matters will be discussed and it is expected the political issue among union men at present will be raised with the trade unionists supporting the C.C.F. platform launching an attack on the other side, led by President Harry Owen, who is against the trades men supporting any party.

Premier Tolmie Opens Saanichton Fall Fair

Need For Marketing Board to Aid Berry Growers Referred to By Premier

With a gratifying attendance, despite the inclement weather, the sixty-fifth annual fall exhibition of the North and South Agricultural Society was officially opened by Premier Tolmie this afternoon.

The exhibit was warmly praised by Premier Tolmie, who was pleased to note the success which Saanich farmers had achieved at the Victoria and Vancouver exhibitions. The Premier, after reviewing the various classes of the fair, referred to the necessity of a marketing board in British Columbia to meet the needs of the berry growers by establishing a minimum price for the sale of fruit in fresh and canned form.

"The fact that this occasion is the sixty-fifth anniversary of the holding of the North and South Saanich fair prompts me to express the hope that the association will not seek 'to retire upon superannuation,' the Premier said in opening his remarks. "I mention this as sixty-five years is the age for retirement of civil servants, but the younger generation, in the case of the fair, can carry on for another sixty-five years, having the benefit of what has been acquired by the generation which is passing away year by year.

PROMOTES FRIENDSHIP

"The Saanichton fair has been known for years as a typical rural fair, where old acquaintances are renewed and social intercourse adds to the pleasure of competing in friendly rivalry for the prizes awarded. After all is said it must be admitted that neighborly intercourse is of more benefit than the acquiring of prize money.

"In the early days of the fair the steamship companies offered special transportation rates for exhibits at Saanichton in order to insure entries from neighboring islands and the mainland. Now the district of Saanich can supply all the exhibits required to fill the spacious accommodation afforded in the buildings, which are a credit to any rural community.

"I am pleased to note that Saanich Jersey breeders, who competed successfully at Vancouver and Victoria exhibitions, have entered their animals for competition at Saanichton. Among these should be mentioned H. E. Burbidge of Royal Oak, Capt. C. R. Wilson and R. Rendall. The inclusion of these herds with those of other local breeders makes a most creditable showing for any rural fair. Much credit is due to R. Rendall for his exhibits of Holstein cattle, which competed against leading herds of this breed at Victoria.

CHILDREN'S CLASSES

"In an effort to keep the young people on the farm it is gratifying to know that three classes are included in the Jersey prize list for boys' and girls' exhibits in the Jersey Clubs for 1931 and 1933. In this connection I might point out to the young people that "Prestoria Oxford Janet" was developed from a Jersey Calf Club entry to be a record breaking cow. She was owned by Foster Whittaker of Armstrong, who was asked to bring her to Vancouver so that a banquet might be given in her honor whilst she looked on at the feasters. It is quite within the range of possibility that one of the heifers in the Saanich Clubs may mature in the same way as "Pretoria Oxford Janet."

"Not every one can own a pure bred cow of outstanding character, and it is fitting that, as has been done, provision should be made for utility classes of grade dairy cattle, which are present to-day in appreciable numbers.

"Similar provision is made in your prize list for utility horses for I see that you are offering prizes for horses suitable for use on a farm where only one horse is required. With the adoption of automobiles and auto trucks the functions of a horse on the farm have now become greatly restricted and the question to decide is just what type of horse is required for the limited use to be made of such animals.

"Although goats are generally looked upon as the milk supply of cottagers in suburban districts, I am glad to see such a goodly number of the 'poor man's cow' as is present to-day, with Saanen and Toggenburg breeds predominating. British Columbia has established itself a supply centre for other districts owing to the goat improvement policy made possible under the Goat Breeders' Protection Act. One Saanich goat produced in one year 4,240 pounds of milk testing 4.66 per cent. In view of the average yield of goats being from 1,500 to 2,000 pounds per year the importance of this record may be understood.

FINE EGG DISPLAY

"In the poultry section we have a pleasing display of utility fowls and, following the policy of some previous years, the commercial egg display is worthy of inspection.

"Now that seeds have taken such a prominent place in agricultural exhibitions it is appropriate that the Saanich association should provide nine classes for farm seeds, of which there is a good display.

"I find upon looking up the list of exhibitors at the World's Grain Exhibition that four were from Saanich and among the awards secured were a first and a second prize. The enterprising persons who exhibited at Regina were: C. W. Stirling of Sidney; James Turner of Cadboro Bay, W. D. Michell and Sunset Seed Company of Keating.

"The potato exhibits indicate that some of the Saanich growers will be in a position to take advantage of the profitable prices which it is expected will be realized from potatoes of next spring.

"In passing I cannot overlook the fruit and vegetable displays, which are so necessary to make up a showing representative of the resources of this favored part of Vancouver Island.

"A very interesting display of school work is found in that section of the fair and reflected great credit upon not only the young people who have executed the work, but also upon the teachers whose supervision has been such an important factor in success.

"In closing I might refer to what must be a self-evident fact to observant persons who are following the trend of agricultural development. Whilst it is important that a high quality product must be grown, it is equally important that there should be a profitable market for what has been grown.

PROSPECTS GOOD

"Saanich growers of strawberries and loganberries may not have realized the prices hoped for during the past two years, but the clean-up of stocks of these fruits during the present season gives grounds for good hopes for next season when no hold-over from the 1933 crop will be on hand to be disposed of.

"During the World's Grain Exhibition at Regina I had the pleasure of attending with Hon. Robert Weir, several sessions of a conference called to consider some plan for orderly marketing of farm produce. At Vancouver Exhibition these conferences were reconvened with the Federal Minister of Agriculture in attendance.

"The proposals presented to Hon. Mr. Weir were that federal legislation should be enacted to provide the Dominion-wide application where a large majority of producers in any designated area desires the setting up of a marketing board. The model for such an act is to be found in the Agricultural Marketing Act of Great Britain, which appears to be giving excellent results in dealing with the regulation of marketing of imports so as not to injure home producers.

"In British Columbia the problem is to protect the producer in the home makets by orderly marketing not only there but in export markets. An instance of how necessary is this protection, can be found in the disposal of strawberry and loganberry crops of Saanich. If a minimum price can be established for sale of the fruit in fresh form and for canning purposes, great benefit will accrue to the growers who, in the past have been the victims of conditions over which they have no control," the Premier concluded.

EQUALITY OF PAY IS URGED

Centennial Church Advocates Equal Salaries For All Ministers at Presbytery

United Church Will Operate Mission Boat on West Coast

Nanaimo, Sept. 20.—Sweeping reductions in salaries of all officials of the United Church in Canada, including an equalization of salaries of ministers within the Presbytery, was advocated in a resolution presented by Rev. W. M. Scott, Centennial United Church, Victoria, to the annual meeting of the Victoria Presbytery of the United Church which concluded here yesterday.

On the reading of the resolution no action was taken by the Presbytery but it was passed on to the general conference for its consideration.

In advocating the endorsement of the resolution, it was pointed out that churches and ministers had suffered financially as well as all other bodies during the last few years. The equality of ministers' salaries within the Presbytery was a strong point of the motion, while it was also felt that the church headquarters in the east should cut down expenditures.

ISLAND PASTOR ELECTED

Rev. J. P. Arrol of Parksville was unanimously elected moderator of the Presbytery for the ensuing year, succeeding Rev. E. P. Church, Victoria. Rev. Thomas Keyworth, Sidney, and Rev. W. R. Brown, Victoria, were re-elected secretary and treasurer respectively.

The sessions were attended by ninety delegates from church of Vancouver Island and nearby points.

One of the most important developments was the decision to operate a mission boat on the West Coast of Vancouver Island, a recent survey by Captain R. G. Scott having indicated the necessity of this. Accordingly it was decided that the Melville Swarthout would commence operations on October 1, as the United Church marine mission boat on the West Coast.

MISSIONARY WORK

The election of officers took place on Monday morning and was followed by committee work in the afternoon. In the evening, the delegates attended a banquet given by the women of Haliburton Street Church, at which the speakers were: Rev. J. P. Arrol, Rev. W. P. Bunt and Rev. Dr. W. G. Wilson, Victoria. At a public meeting in the evening an address was given on "The Missionary Position of Our Church," by Rev. Dr. Wilson of Vancouver. Pictures of mission work on the coast of the island were presented by Captain Scott of the Thomas Crosby Marine Mission.

On Tuesday morning amalgamation of the James Bay and Victoria West United churches of Victoria, under one charge, with Rev. W. R. Brown, as pastor, was approved.

Other committee statements showed that church membership and attendance had increased over last year and indicated the Presbytery to be in good condition in comparison with surrounding districts.

DUKE ON STAND IN PROMIS TRIAL

George Edward Duke of San Jose and Oakland, Cal., was on the stand before Mr. Justice Fisher in the Supreme Court all morning to-day under cross-examination by A. E. Bull, K.C., in the trial of the action for possession of the Promis Block.

On one side of the case are A. G. Col and the heirs of the estate of Oscar and Sophia Promis, all of California. They are suing the Duke family, to whom title for the property passed just before Mr. Promis's death in 1925. Mr. Col and the heirs claim the deal and the payments were never completed.

With Mr. Bull is C. C. Merritt of Vancouver for the heirs. The defence is being conducted by A. D. Crease and D. M. Gordon of Victoria. The trial is expected to continue until Thursday evening at least.

SERVICE TO-MORROW

Funeral services will be held from the Sands Mortuary, to-morrow afternoon, at 2 o'clock, for Albert Edward Cullen. Canon F. A. P. Chadwick will officiate, and the remains will be laid at rest in Royal Oak Burial Park.

WAS CRUSHED BETWEEN CARS

Coroner's Jury Told of Accident Which Caused Fatal Injuries to Man

Death of John H. Sagar, which occurred more than two years after he sustained injuries in an accident between two trucks near Mount Newton, was found by a coroner's jury this morning to have been caused accidentally.

Coroner E. C. Hart pointed out to the jurymen they could not bring in an indictment in any case because it was more than a year and a day between the date of the accident and the time of death.

The late Mr. Sagar, the evidence showed, was employed with a provincial government road gang on the West Saanich Road on May 29, 1931, and when the accident happened he was standing on the right running board of the machine as it was proceeding back to the tool shed at quitting time.

A laundry truck, driven by Thomas N. Beale, advanced on to a stretch of unopened road and had been ordered to stop by the road foreman, turning off to the right preparatory to reversing direction. The road gang's truck was passing this machine as it backed up, causing a collision in which Mr. Sagar was crushed.

Dr. G. Kenning said the man suffered a fractured pelvis and other injuries in this region of the body. This eventually brough on bladder and kidney trouble from which he died last Sunday.

L. Holman, one of the road workers; Joseph Russell, the foreman, and Mr. Beale, also testified.

WINE CASE IS ADJOURNED

A. Anderson was arraigned before Magistrate George Jay in the Saanich Police Court yesterday on a charge of keeping wine for sale and was remanded to Thursday.

The charge followed a raid by Chief Allan Rankin and Saanich police officers on Monday night in which a quantity of liquid alleged to be loganberry and blackberry wine was seized.

NOTABLES HEARD BY MACFARLANE

Victoria Lawyer Returns From Three Gatherings, Addressed By World-leading Thinkers

After attending three of the most important conferences in Canada this year, A. D. Macfarlane, K.C., has returned to his home in Victoria.

Five weeks ago Mr. Macfarlane went to Banff, where as an accredited delegate he participated for a week in the discussions of the Institute of Pacific Relations, attended by representatives of the governments of the chief countries bordering on the Pacific Ocean.

From Banff, he went to Ottawa, where he attended the annual meetings of the Canadian Bar Association.

From Ottawa he went to Trinity College, Port Hope, where for one week he participated in the Liberal Summer School.

At Banff, Mr. Macfarlane heard some of the most brilliant political thinkers of the Orient as well as of the continent. At Ottawa he came into contact with outstanding legal minds of this country, as well as the special representatives of the bars of England and the United States.

The gathering Trinity College, however, was exceptional, Mr. Macfarlane said. Among the speakers assembled during the week there were the possessors of names outstanding in current world thought. Some of these were: Professor R. M. MacIver, professor of political science at Columbia University and the author of many standard works; Professor T. E. Gregory, who is the Sir Ernest Cassel professor of economics at the University of London, author of many works, and a member of the MacMillan commission on finance and industry in Britain; Prof. C. A. Curtis of Queen's University; Prof. P. E. Corbett, of McGill; Professor Raymond Money, a member of President Roosevelt's "brain trust"; W. Averell Harriman, chairman of the New York State emergency committee of the National Recovery Act; Hu Shih, president of the Chinese National Institute; Sir Herbert Samuel, from London, and a long list of professors from all the universities in Canada.

DINNER HELD BY RADIO MEN

De Forest Crosley Host to Dealers at Demonstration of New Models

Radios of 1934 Are Streamlined; Company's Position Solid, Say Officials

With the introduction of the new De Forest Crosley radios for 1934, the local salesmen and distributors were the guests of the De Forest Crosley Corporation at a dinner held in the Empress Hotel yesterday evening. J. E. Johnstone and J. R. Bollens, representatives of the organization, welcomed the guests and presented an attractive arrangement of the 1934 radios.

"This year marks the tenth anniversary of the De Forest Crosley Corporation. Ten years ago, three men and a woman bookkeeper, with a total capital of $13,000, launched the De Forest Crosley Radio Company in Canada," stated Mr. Johnstone, in a brief address. "To-day we rank with the leaders in the radio field."

The company this year has adopted a new policy which completely eliminates any models which were slow sellers, stated Mr. Johnstone. This policy will combine all latest features in models at a low cost.

"We have introduced in all our radios for 1934 the latest development in radio, that of the stream-line design, which we feel will not only make an attractive furnishing of the radio, but will be welcomed by housewives everywhere. The machines are admirably synchronized," remarked Mr. Johnstone.

The speaker told of the automobile radio perfect by De Forest Crosley engineers to a point formerly thought impossible. It is now accepted by the leading automobile manufacturers in Canada as standard equipment on their motor cars.

Mr. Johnstone presented the radio display and gave an interesting review of the new developments as each was presented. A general inspection by the guests followed.

A telegram was read from W. T. Burnham of the company expressing regret of his inability to attend the dinner due to illness. During his address, Mr. Johnstone said the De Forest Crosley Corporation was solely a Canadian enterprise, without any foreign connection other than the paying of royalties on certain radio patents.

Following the dinner Walter Fletcher spoke on behalf of the guests. He expressed thanks to the company for the entertainment and extended the sympathy of the gathering to Mr. Burnham.

Coast League Teams Usher In Soccer Season Here On Saturday

THE SPORTS MIRROR

Lynn Patrick Tells About His Sport Activities in Montreal

* * *

Jack Sharkey Fails in His Comeback and Is "All Washed Up"

LYNN PATRICK, Victoria's great all-round athlete, and rated by Coast coaches as one of the greatest Canadian rugby football ends in Canada, who has taken up residence in Montreal, is having a great time in his work-outs with the famous Montreal Winged Wheelers football team, according to a letter received from him. Lynn states that he likes the eastern city and is working hard to catch both a football berth and a position on one of Montreal's leading amateur hockey outfits. His letter in part follows:

"The Wheelers are a classy aggregation with about seven or eight stars from the United States, including Carl Perina, from Penn State an All-American halfback in 1931, who scored three touchdowns in one game against Notre Dame. He stands about six feet two inches and weighs 211 pounds stripped. Lyman Abbott, quarter-back and Mel Means, half-back, both from Maine and Lester Taft, an end from Vermont, are high classy players.

"We started our first heavy workout last night and they gave us lots of tackling. They started to weed out the players the night before last, but the coach evidently missed me as there was a heavy suit in my locker last night. I expect my ticket any minute now but am hoping for the best. There were a couple of photographers at the practice last night taking pictures. There are about five or six hundred railbirds at our practices and they have an announcer broadcast the plays over a loudspeaker in the grandstand.

* * *

"I have been offered a tryout with the Montreal Royals hockey club. I was told they have a good chance to win the Allan Cup this year, so if I can only make the team I think I'll hang up the old basketball togs. I'm sure going to try hard. A fellow gets lots of chance to play hockey here as they have so many leagues. If you are any good you can play five or six nights a week. The first practice of the Royals is slated for October 25 and I'll be at the door when the watchman comes to open up the joint.

"The coach of the Notre Dame de Grace basketball team, that is the club Windsor Alumni defeated in the eastern finals last year, looked me up the other day and showed me over their gymnasium. They are a nice bunch of fellows. Three of the American football players are going to play basketball for a French outfit called the "Nationals." This outfit has been after Murray to play for them. Murray is going to Westmount High and I think he is going to play most of his sport at the school. He might play basketball outside but that is all."

"All washed up." That is the expression that can be used in reference to Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight boxing champion, following his decisive beating at the hands of King Levinsky in ten rounds at Chicago on Monday night. Sharkey might just as well hang up his gloves, sit back and enjoy the fruits of his years of campaigning in the prize ring. He has made lots of money and according to reports has held on to his cash. Sharkey is one fighter who got more breaks than the average run of mitt slingers. He was given two or three shots at the heavyweight title before he finally won it from Max Schmeling on a questionable decision. Sharkey had a staunch friends in the late William Muldoon, former powerful member of the New York State Athletic Commission, and always seemed to be pushed into spots where he could pick off handsome purses. Sharkey was never a truly great fighter. He had a beautiful style but often bungled his opportunities by refusing to take chances of getting hurt. When he is unabe to at least earn a draw with a fighter of Levinsky's ability, who is nothing more than a slugger with little knowledge of the finer points of the art, Sharkey is through. Levinsky now wants a bout with Carnera. Let him polish off Max Baer first.

Esquimalt, Last Year's Champions, To Meet Thistles

Teams Will Play at Bullen Park, New Home of Dockers; Esquimalt Strong

VICTORIA WEST TO OPPOSE CITY

Will Meet at Heywood Ave. Pitch; Both Fixtures Start at 3 o'Clock

Victoria's soccer season will be ushered in on Saturday afternoon when the Victoria and District Coast League stages its opening card with a pair of matches billed. Saanich Thistles will journey to Esquimalt to engage the Dockers in the opening league fixture at the new Bullen Park, future home of the Esquimalt club. At the Heywood Avenue grounds the Victoria West and Victoria City will hook up. Both engagements will start at 3 o'clock, with John McKinnon handling the Esquimalt - Thistles game, and Dave Swan looking over the Wests-City battle.

All the teams have been holding practices for the last two or three weeks and the four managers are quite confident they have this year's champions under their wings.

ESQUIMALT LAND A DOCKER

John Mesher, associated with the Esquimalt club for years and years, was enthusiastic when talked to this morning over his team's chances to repeat their victory of last season when the Dockers lifted the city championship. Esquimalt will have the reliable Louise De Costa in goal. This boy, rated one of the best custodians in British Columbia, has long been a tower of strength to the team. For full backs the Dockers have the elongated Ivan Sweeney and Ab March. Both are reliable kickers and good tacklers. On the half-back line will be Buzz Evans, Williams and Hicks. The forward line will be composed of Bill Warswick, Mike Wagland, Miller, John Watt and Scotty Stewart. Warswick and Miller are graduates from junior ranks.

This gives Esquimalt a well-balanced club and one that should go a long way in the league race.

Saanich Thistles, with John Ewing as skipper, have gathered a formidable aggregation. Wally Rowe, last season with the Victoria West will be between the sticks. He is a good reliable goalie. On the back line the Saanich eleven will have George Leggatt and Freddie Gibbons. The latter was last year with Victoria City and held down one of the back positions on the all-star team in the inter-city matches. The half-back line will be made up of Ronnie Williams, Joe and Jim Crowe. These boys are all veterans, and form one of the finest intermediate lines in the city. On the forward line will be Freddie Price, Eddie Viggers, Noel Morgan, Edgar Borde and one other.

WESTS AND CITY

Dr. Poyntz, energetic manager of the Wests, was a little reticent when question to-day regarding his starting line-up. Players known to have been signed by he greenshirts include Ken Thompson, Jack Okell, Lorandini, Stan Wright, Scotty Robinson, Harry Youson and Pat Mulcahy. The Wests will be without the services this year of Terry Peers, hard working half-back and captain of last year's squad, who has left the city.

Victoria City's line-up for Saturday remains in the dark. However, Joe Bloom backer of the club, has no doubt been busy in recent weeks, and will have a strong club on hand to stack up against the Wests.

Just what arrangements will be made for inter-city games this season is not known. Football affairs in Vancouver are in a tangled up condition, and until matters are straightened out little action can be taken.

Telephone-Asahis Game Is Postponed

Vancouver, Sept. 20.—Rain yesterday evening forced postponement of the Telephones-Asahis fixture, first in a three-out-of-five series for the British Columbia amateur baseball championship.

Weather permitting, the teams will start the series to-night at Athletic Park.

The annual general meeting of the Willows Badminton Club will be held to-morrow night at the Oak Bay Municipal Hall at 8 o'clock. All members are requested to attend as important matters will be discussed.

Levinsky Offered Match With Baer

Los Angeles, Sept. 20.—Jack Dempsey said yesterday he had telegraphed King Levinsky, conqueror of Jack Sharkey, an offer to meet Max Baer November 21 at Wrigley Field here.

The former heavyweight champion did not disclose what terms he had offered.

"I believe Baer needs a fight or two before next summer," said Dempsey. "Levinsky is a dangerous hitter and a rough chap who will make Baer step all the route."

Washington Still Two Games Out Of American Pennant

Senators Drop Second Straight to St. Louis; New York Yanks Win Pair

Philadelphia A's Win Over Detroit

Brooklyn Dodgers Have Field Day at Plate to Turn Back Chicago 12 to 3

William Harold Terry, sturdy young man from Memphis, who took over the management of the New York Giants a year ago, when John McGraw retired, led his club back home from the west to-day with the National League pennant added to its luggage. Meanwhile Washington Senators still were marking time along the American League pennant trail, needing two more decisions for them or against New York Yankees to clinch the other place in the world series.

The Giants had the National League race settled for them when the Phillies knocked their last rivals, Pittsburgh Pirates, out of the running. Knowing they were "in" from the second inning on, the Giants went down to a 12 to 3 defeat at the hands of St. Louis Cardinals in the last game of their western tour. But they could afford to lose that game and all the nine others that are left on their schedule after the Pirates dropped a 3 to 2 decision in the second game of a doubleheader.

After beating the Phils, 2 to 1, in the opener, the Pirates fell when the Phils put on an eighth-inning rally for two runs.

SENATORS BEATEN

The American League race tightened up meanwhile. The Senators lost their second straight game to St. Louis Browns, 4 to 0. The Yankees did their part toward staying in the race by overwhelming Chicago White Sox, 10 to 1 and 10 to 3. This reduced the Senator's lead from nine to seven and a half games, but two victories in their remaining eight games still will win the flag for Washington even if the Yanks take all of the nine they have left.

Philadelphia Athletics beat Detroit 5 to 2, while Boston Red Sox defeated Cleveland Indians, 4 to 3. Boston Braves turned in a 3 to 0 victory over Cincinnati Reds. Brooklyn Dodgers had a field day and shellacked Chicago Cubs, 12 to 3.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

New York, Sept. 20. — New York Giants clinched their thirteenth National League pennant yesterday, establishing a new major league record, as Philadelphia defeated Pittsburgh, 3 to 2, in the second game of of a doubleheader, and eliminated the

LEVINSKY WILL RECEIVE $3,200

Victor Over Sharkey Will Get Only Enough to Pay Training Expenses

Revised figures by the boxing commission, on the other hand, indicated Levinsky, now busily angling for a bout with champion Primo Carnera, received only $3,200 for his victory.

VICTORIA GOLF PLAYER BEATEN

Mrs. C. E. Wilson Loses to Ada Mackenzie in Canadian Closed Championship

Margarey Kirkham, Medal Winner, Advances at Expense of Donna Baxter

St. Charles Country Club, Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—Old man par enlisted the aid of a booming northwester here yesterday to help him get back some of his own at the Canadian women's closed golf championship. Margery Kirkham had submitted him to a drubbing Monday when she took the qualifying medal with a thirty-seven on the last nine, one under standard figures. The four leading players who advanced into second-round play yesterday, together collected less than a score of pars and only one birdie.

Despite the fierceness of the elements, Miss Kirkham, who belongs to Forest Hills Golf Club at Montreal, played a fine brand of golf yesterday in defeating Donna Baxter, Manitoba junior champion, 8 and 7. A steady first nine at forty-four, including a fine birdie four on the thirty-yard third and three pars, enabled her to make the turn six up. After a little difficulty on the tenth, where she needed a six, but won the hole, she took the eleventh in par five, to make her total of standards four.

VICTORIAN BEATEN

Ada Mackenzie, seeking to retain her closed crown after winning the open title from Miss Kirkham last week, usually gathers a majority of pars, but yesterday she had only half a dozen in her match with Mrs. Charles E. Wilson of Victoria, whom she defeated, 4 and 3. Miss Mackenzie's forty-three for the first nine was the best half score recorded yesterday, but Mrs. Wilson gave her a stiff battle in the second half.

Four up at the turn, Miss Mackenzie halved the next two in one over par and took the twelfth with a par four. But two bad sevens in succession forced her to play on the short fifteenth, where she carded a par four.

Two Reginans matched shots yesterday with Mrs. R. S. Rideout, the victor over Mrs. Gordon Brown. In the first nine Mrs. Rideout, playing a top-form game, finished six up, but coming home, Mrs. Brown found the greens more to her liking, though she could not overcome the early lead. Mrs. Rideout finished two up, to advance to the second round to-day.

MRS. BEAIRSTO WINS

Mrs. R. K. Beairsto, Manitoba champion, who tied with Miss Mackenzie Monday for second place in the qualifying standing, had but a single standard figure hole as she ran up a poor 48 for the first nine against Alice Macdonald, Winnipeg, whom she vanquished, 6 and 5. On a majority of the holes she needed a six, and except for the birdie the rest werg fives.

Isobel Pepall, Ontario junior champion, who is playing from Lambton Golf and Country Club, Toronto, advanced at the expense of Mrs. D. S. Creighton, Saskatoon, former champion of Saskatchewan, 8 and 7. Miss Pepall manged to keep her fine drive straight against the wind and carded six pars, although she had a total of 47 at the end of the first nine, when she was six up on her oponent.

All Divisions Of Rugby League To Start October 28

October 11 Set as Final Date For Receiving Entries of All Sections

Bumper Season Is Anticipated

Carew Martin Elected Chairman of Referees' Board at Rugby Union Meeting

Play in all divisions of the senior rugby league of Victoria will commence on October 28, and the final date for receiving entries will be October 11, the Victoria Rugby Union executive decided at a meeting yesterday evening in the offices of Mason and Diespecker, Broad Street.

The officials dealt with final plans for the opening of the season, which promises to be one of the most successful in several years, with the arranged appearance here of the Stanford University team from California which will engage in a home and home series with a Victoria and British Columbia team. Entry forms for Senior A, Senior B and the intermediate sections are now available.

A report of the recent executive meeting of the British Columbia Rugby Union was submitted by H. J. Ketchen who told of the proposed visit of the Stanford team here, the date having been tentatively set for January 1, while the B.C. team is also expected to visit the south, on a date not yet decided upon. It was also planned to stage a game in Seattle between the B.C. aggregation and the University fifteen, Mr. Ketchen explained.

PLAN UNFAVORABLE

Club to play in the Victoria League this year was received, but owing to certain difficulties encountered in meeting costs of transportation, it was felt this would not be a favorable plan. Robert McInnes informed the meeting that he understood Nanaimo had recently joined the Vancouver B division since writing and it was decided to confirm this by letter and leave the matter in abeyance. It was pointed out, however, that Nanaimo would take part in the knockout series for the Cowichan Cup, emblematic of the Vancouver Island championship.

Carew Martin was unanimously elected chairman of the board of referees for the coming season and a letter of thanks was ordered forwarded to Colonel R. C. Cooper who has acted in this capacity for several years but who was unable to accept the post this year owing to failing health. In regard to referees for the season the union will seek the names of anyone willing to undertake these duties, from representatives of the various clubs taking part in the league.

DATES FOR PARK

President R. H. B. Ker reported to the meeting that the following dates had been procured for the use of the Athletic Park for rugby purposes; October 28, November 11 and 25; December 9, 23 and 26; January 1, 6 and 20; February 3 and 17; March 3, 17 and 31. The park will only be used for rugby on January 1 if the touring southern team is in the city.

Another decision reached was that the first named team in the schedule would be the home team and must be responsible for a collection on any of the open playing fields.

A letter of thanks from the Y.M.C.A. for the excellent work of union officials in staging the track and field meet at the Athletic Park on August 29, was received and filed.

It was decided that regular meetings of the union executive should be held every Monday evening at 5 o'clock to consider any developments arising out of league games.

Perry May Play At Vancouver

Vancouver, Sept. 20.—Hoping to have Fred Perry, British Davis Cup hero and winner of the American championship, visit Vancouver September 25 for an exhibition match with Ellsworth Vines or another ranking player, E. J. H. Cardinall, secretary of the Pacific Northwest Tennis Association, has wired south, endeavoring to make suitable arrangements.

Perry is scheduled to sail for an Australian tour September 27, following the Pacific Coast championships in Los Angeles. Cardinall's plan is to send Perry south by plane following his appearance here, in order that he can make connections with his boat.

QUEBEC BEAVERS IN HOCKEY LOOP

New York, Sept. 20.—Quebec Beavers yesterday became full fledged members of the Canadian-American Hockey League.

When the Moguls of the minor circuit gathered in regular meeting here, the Quebec application for membership was accepted. Last season the Beavers operated as tentative members of the family.

Drawing up of the league schedule was put over until the October session.

LEITHAM BATTLES MIDGET WOLGAST

Montreal, Sept. 30.—Contracts were signed yesterday for a match here on September 27 between Bobby Leitham, Canadian bantamweight champion, and Midget Wolgast, ranked third in the flyweight division by the National Boxing Association.

Gridders Will Work To-night

Victoria's Canadian ruggers are continuing their daily workouts in preparation for the opening of the season here on Saturday at the Athletic Park against New Westminster. To-night, at 6 o'clock, another of the series of chalk lectures will be held at the park, and all players are requested to be on hand. The actual local line-up for the game will be announced on Friday.

ROCHESTER IN SERIES LEAD

Defeat Buffalo 6 to 3 For Game Margin in International Baseball Final

Columbus Whip Minneapolis 14 to 11 to Take American Association Title

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 20.—Two vicious home runs by Estel Crabtree and Ray Pepper, and Jim Lindsey's excellent relief hurling set down Buffalo Bisons here yesterday 6 to 3, and gave Rochester Red Wings a 2 to 1 advantage in the final play-offs series for the Inter-

More than 4,000 fans saw the two clubs battle to a 3 to 3 tie for four innings and then saw Pepper smash his circuit blow over the left field fence off John Wilson, with Crabtree on base to break the deadlock.

Buffalo could find but two safe hits in their bat rack off the offerings of Lindsey in six and two-thirds innings. He retired eleven men in order.

Crabtree hit his homer in the first inning off Bill Gould after Carey had beat out a slow roller to Brown.

The clubs now will move to Buffalo to finish the series, in night games starting to-morrow.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 20.—A relief pitcher who could hit as well as hurl gave Columbus the championship in the American Association play-off yesterday.

The Red Birds defeated Minneapolis 14 to 11 in ten innings, marked by thirty-two hits, including eight home runs, off nine pitchers to make the championship series four games to two.

The versatile pitcher was Ralph Judd who relieved Lefty Heise in the ninth with the score tied, the bases full and one out. He quickly retired the side and then, in the first of the tenth, hit a long homer with two on and two on. The big right-hander was again too good for the locals in their half of the tenth. Squelching them in order and fanning the last man, the pinch hitter.

Columbus, which finished the regular playing season fifteen and a half games ahead of the field, qualified for the play-off victory to engage the International League title holders in the junior world series, meeting either in Buffalo or Rochester.

HENRY WOODS EASY WINNER

Yakima Negro Lightweight Hands J. Alvarado Terrific Beating at Seattle

Seattle, Sept. 20.—After smashing his opponent around the ring for eight rounds and opening a bad cut over his right eye, Henry Woods, Yakima negro lightweight, was awarded a technical knockout over Jimmy Alvarado, Los Angeles, in a scheduled ten-round boxing bout here yesterday evening. AL FOREMAN WINS TITLE

Regains Canadian Lightweight Crown By Ten-round Call Over Tommy Bland

Foreman Gives Smart Performance to Win Back Title He Lost to Townsend

Montreal, Sept. 20.—With a barrage of stinging rights, Al Foreman regained his Canadian lightweight title after a three-year lapse and successfully defended his British Empire lightweight crown yesterday evening by outpointing Tommy Bland, Toronto, youngster, over the ten-round route at the Mount Royal Arena here.

Foreman, making his first appearance in a Canadian ring since his departure for England and other sections of the world, put on a smart performance that had a crowd of 5,000 yelling its appreciation throughout the ten rounds.

The first British Empire title encounter in Canada saw the dark-haired Torontonian exhibit smart boxing and general two-handed attack against the careful and methodical right-handed offensive of the veteran campaigner. Foreman hurt Bland with his hard smashes to the body and head, but the youngster kept coming for more despite a near-paralyzed left thigh.

BACK ON TOP

By his win Foreman was back on the top of the Canadian lightweight heap once again, Billy Townsend, of Nanaimo, took the title away from him in 1930 in the Pacific Coast city, but later lost it to Bland.

Two judges ruled for Foreman, while [illegible] 192½ and Bland 134.

Joe Chnouly, smart St. Louis featherweight, scored a clean-cut victory over Bobby Laurence, Toronto's Canadian featherweight champion, in ten rounds. Laurence absorbed a tremendous amount of punishment in the body, but gamely kept plunging in. Chnouly weighed 132¼ and Laurence 130½.

THE BIG SIX

Spud Davis and Jimmy Foxx broke the weak-hitting spell that has hung over the Big-Six batters for the last week or so, by doing some heavy clouting yesterday. Davis hit safely four times in seven attempts against Pittsburgh to shoot his average up four points to .340. Foxx made two hits, one his forty-sixth homer of the season, in three times at bat, to lift his mark two points to .356.

PLAYER-PILOTS WILL HANDLE TWO CLUBS IN COMING WORLD SERIES

First Time Since 1906 That Contending Teams Have Both Been Guided by Player-managers; Bill Terry, New York Giants, and Joe Cronin, Washington Senators, Are Brilliant Players.

By Alan Gould
Associated Press Sports Editor

New York, Sept. 20. — For the first time since 1906, the American and National League rivals for the world baseball championship both will be directed on the field by player managers.

There have been a number of player pilots since then, of course, on one side of the battleground or the other, but William Harold Terry of the New York Giants, and Joseph Cronin of the Washington Senators will be the first pair to combine master-minding and personal exploits in the world series since Fielder Jones led Chicago White Sox to triumph over Frank Chance's Cubs.

The Senators expect history to repeat itself. Cronin carries the Washington banner into the championship fray where "Bucky" Harris, then the "Boy Wonder," left off as the pilot of the pennant-winning Senators of 1924-25. They whipped the world champion New York Yankees. They expect to "take" the Giants.

Giant rooters have faith in Terry, as John McGraw's successor, for the reason he has already achieved the supposedly "impossible" by bringing the club home in front this year after being picked to finish no better than sixth.

GREAT HITTERS

Terry and Cronin both are great hitters. Defensively they are the class of their positions, in either big league. They have the knack of setting the pace or producing the hits that count the most. Otherwise they are radically different personalities.

As ball players go Terry is a veteran, while Cronin is in his prime. Bill will be thirty-five in October and Joe twenty-seven the same month.

Terry is in absolute charge of the Giants on the field. He takes orders from no one when it comes to tactics, choice of pitchers or shifts in the lineup.

Cronin, softer-spoken and less dynamic than his rival, has acquired a thorough knowledge of baseball and has behind him the advice and counsel of one of the game's shrewdest strategists, Clark Griffith.

TABLE TENNIS

For the purpose of forming a table tennis league in Victoria, a meeting will be held at the Y.M.C.A. to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock. All interested are invited to attend.

Yesterday's defeat was Pittsburgh's sixty-fifth of the season against eighty-two victories, including a 2 to 1 triumph in the first half of the bargain bill. If the Giants lose all the rest of their games, ten in all, including yesterday's game at St. Louis, they still will end the season one percentage point higher than the Pirates, who have seven games left.

Billy Townsend Is Beaten By Chinese

Vancouver Welterweight Drops Ten-round Call at Portland to Ah Wing Lee

Oriental Puts on Rousing Rally in Last Three Rounds to Capture Nod

Portland, Ore., Sept. 20.—A two-fisted barrage in the late rounds proved too much for Billy Townsend and the Vancouver, B.C., welterweight dropped a ten-round decision to Ah Wing Lee, Portland Chinese boxer, here yesterday evening.

Lee came from behind after Townsend had taken the lead in the earlier rounds, evening up the fight in the eighth and ninth. Then in the tenth the Chinese boxer, increasing his speed, rocked the Canadian into all corners of the ring with swinging rights and lefts to pile up a decisive margin.

Lee caught Townsend with a smashing left in the opening round that had the Canadian bewildered temporarily, but he apparently could not follow up his advantage. Townsend was scoring with long rights to the head as the round ended.

OUTBOXES LEE

In the second and third rounds Townsend continued to outbox Lee, and held his advantage through the fourth and fifth. The Canadian switched to a body attack in the sixth that had Lee worried, but the Chinese lad began to counter in the next round, holding his own. At the start of the eighth Lee began the attack that gave him the fight. Whipping lefts to the body and the chin, he collected enough points to even the match by the end of the ninth.

Coming out at the tenth, Lee drove a hard left into Townsend's midriff that noticeably slowed the Vancouver boy, then piled up the points that won the battle, driving lefts and rights to the body and chin with Townsend attempting desperately to cover up.

Bowling Scores

Fourteen teams will swing into action on Thursday night at 9 o'clock at the Olympic Alleys in the Senior Fivepin League competing for the Ker and Stephenson trophy. Our Own Brand, last year's winner, are back in the field to defend their laurels, while several new teams have also entered. Many of the 1932 teams have strengthened their line-ups and some stiff competition is anticipated.

The new teams entered include: Sons of Canada, Spencer's Hairdressing, Maple Leafs, Tillicum Athletic Club, Hudson's Bay Company and B.C. Electric. To the player scoring the highest three-game total on Thursday, King's Shoe Store will donate a pair of bowling shoes.

The draw for the opening night follows:

Our Own Brand vs. Spencer's Hairdressing.
Colonist vs. Maple Leafs.
~~Y.M.C.A. vs. Standard Steam Laundry.~~
Tillicum Athletic Club vs. Canadian National.
Hudson's Bay Company vs. Straiths.
Canadian Pacific vs. B.C. Electric.

Four squads of an anticipated six-team Olympic Senior Tenpin League went into action yesterday evening for the 1933-34 season.

The Jokers and Wengers, both with revamped lineups, met in the feature match, the decision going to the Jokers, last year's champions, by the odd game. Art Porter, Wenger's lead-off man, was the big noise with 266 single and 638 for the three-game string. Two 600 scores were rolled on each team.

In the other match, the Poodle Dog took a couple from the Imperial Oil, W. Logie having the high score of 579.

Next week, it is expected, the sixth team in the league will have been formed and the full schedule will be rounded out. League officials are now attempting to get in touch with players to form the other squad.

The Women's Commercial Fivepin League also started play yesterday evening with fourteen teams in action. [illegible]

Another new coach makes his debut into the exalted circle of Canadian intercollegiate football in the person of Teddy Reeve, star lacrosse player and peerless middle-wing with the once-champion Balmy Beach team. He will try to form a winning team at Queen's University this year. Warren Stevens will be back at Toronto University, with little of last year's team to work on. Joe Breen at Western University has even less. Shaughnessy at McGill has nearly all last year's team intact, and it looks like Shag's year in the eastern Canada Intercollegiate.

MILLIONS FOR FARM CREDITS

Morgenthau Reveals Plan to Hasten Flow of Money Into Belt

Canadian Press

Washington, Sept. 20.—A plan to hasten the flow of money into the United States farm belt so as to get it moving at the rate of more than $50,000,000 a month by December was made known to-day by Henry Morgenthau Jr., governor of the farm credit administration. His plan contemplates putting $400,000,000 into the farm belt through farm mortgage loans in the next six months.

He called for greater liberality in appraising farm lands, in a message to officials and employees of the twelve federal land banks and more than 4,000 farm loan associations.

He told them to increase their staffs in order to keep pace with the flow of applications from debt-ridden farmers. These are [illegible] at the rate of 17,000 a week and action on 185,000 applications is pending.

He estimated applications for loans amounted to about $800,000,000, or almost two-thirds of the sum land banks have outstanding in loans.

During June and July, loans were made at the rate from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 monthly, but activity has been stepped up and during September Morgenthau estimated about $14,000,000 in loans would be made, compared with $27,000,000 for the entire year of 1932.

Wheat Sinks As Pit Lacks Support and Selling Is General

Canadian Press

Winnipeg, Sept. 20.—A last-minute reaction in Chicago, coupled with increased hedging sales and a general lack of support here, sent wheat futures prices downward on Winnipeg Grain Exchange to-day to close 1⅛ to 1¼ cents under the previous finish.

Increased selling swept trading out of the doldrums and the close was quite active. October option wound up at 68⅞ cents, December at 70¾ and May at 75¾ cents. All deliveries were only fractionally removed from the low points at the finish.

Export sales were estimated at 250,000 bushels and buying for this purpose had little effect on prices.

A little selling for southern interests and scattered hedging constituted most of the pressure and values held at levels near the previous close nearly all day.

Closing quotations at Liverpool were ½d to ⅝d higher, while Buenos Aires values were steady.

Demand for cash grains was only moderate, with spreads on No. 1 hard ½ cent easier. All coarse grains tended easier with the exception of barley, which firmed fractionally, due to expectation of fair buying by United States interests in the near future.

HESITANCY IS SEEN IN MART

Canadian Press

Toronto, Sept. 20.—While trading in gold shares continued to-day on a heavy scale the market had a note of hesitancy and nervousness that prevented prices from making the most of the sharp advance for bar gold in the London market.

McIntyre advanced to 47.75, up 1.25, to a new high record. Base metals and silvers were slightly weaker and lower. The whole list weakened sharply at the close.

Dome closed at 38.25, off 15 cents. Hollinger, Teck-Hughes and Bralorne closed off ten to 25 cents and Wright-Hargreaves 45 cents, but Lake Shore retained a small advance and Pioneer advanced 25 to 12.50. Hargreaves dropped from 8.50 to 7.75 in a noon sell off.

TORONTO HAS WEAKER TONE

Canadian Press

Toronto, Sept. 20.—Toronto Stock Exchange listings closed with a generally weak tone after passing through a series of nervous slips and recoveries throughout the day. A final sell-off carried leaders off one to three points.

Metal shares failed to reach the level of yesterday's closing prices. Nickel at 21.70 sold down 90 cents. Smelters lost a point at 141½. Brazilian and Ford "A" registered a net loss of about ⅜ and C.P.R. was unchanged at 116.

Food shares were lower. Consolidated Bakeries was off ¾, Loblaw "A" ¼ and Western Canada Flour ½. Small recessions were general in the beverage and industrial groups.

New York, Sept. 20.—Stocks quietly worked upward in the late dealings to-day, recovering about half their foreign losses of one to three or more points.

Metals tended to recover from nearly profit taking. Homestake Mining cancelled a ten-point drop. U.S. Steel regained a loss of more than a point. Case and U.S. Smelting continued to show declines of around three points in the late trading; while losses of one to three points were reduced in American Can, Allied Chemical, American Smelting, National Distillers, Union Pacific and New York Central.

Transfers approximated 2,500,000 shares.

New York, Sept. 20. — Topsy-turvy financial markets to-day presented an enigma to bullish and bearish forces alike as contrary trends appeared in most speculative and investment categories.

Prices broke shortly after the opening under a barrage of profit taking. The ticker tape ran behind and large blocks of recent favorites were sold for losses of one to three or more points.

Then there was a moderate recovery and another sag in the second hour. The activity tended to die down on the mild rallies.

Grains, cotton and other commodities were rather heavy. The United States dollar droped to a new low in terms of gold currencies, but steadied later. Highest grade bonds continued weak.

With most Canadian stocks and bonds under moderate pressure, the Dominion dollar advanced ⅝ cent to another new high for the past year or more at 98.62½ cents.

Metal shares failed to respond to another advance in the price of gold at $32.28 an ounce. U.S. Smelting was off about four, while losses of one to two or more were recorded by Cerro de Pasco, Kennecott, American Smelting, Anaconda, Alaska Juneau and St. Joseph lead. Homestake gave up ten points.

Other losers of one to three or more included American Telephone, U.S. Steel, New York Central, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, National Distillers, Chrysler, Allied Chemical, Case, American Can, Western Union, Westinghouse and Goodyear. Even the oils were easier.

Financial observers seemingly were unable to give an explanation for the weird actions of the security and commodity markets. Economic and monetary indications were of such a contradictory nature, commission houses reported that the outlook was one of much uncertainty.

U.S. DOLLAR HOLDS TO-DAY

Canadian Money, After Reaching 99 Cents, Closes Below Yesterday

Canadian Press and Associated Press

New York, Sept. 20.—After advancing to the highest rates since the United Kingdom left gold in September, 1931, British currencies turned easy on foreign exchange markets today and closed with small net losses. The French franc, however, continued firm in relation to the United States dollar and closed with a slight advance.

The closing rate on the Canadian dollar was 98 cents, down ⅛ of a cent from yesterday. Earlier in the session it had advanced to 99 cents, highest since September 17 two years ago. The final rate represented a premium on United States funds of approximately 2 1-16 per cent.

Short covering by European speculators was reported to be a factor in the decline of British currencies after the early bulge.

The closing rate on the franc was 6.05 cents, up .00½ of a cent

London, Sept. 20.—The United States dollar fell to a new low record in terms of gold and gold currencies today as renewed excitement was manifested in the exchange market over reports the United States had decided on some form of inflation within a few weeks.

The closing rate for the dollar was $4.85⅛, to the pound.

The dollar's value in sterling is the cheapest since July 19, when the quotation passed the old parity to $4.87¼.

Paris, Sept. 20.—Heavy selling in large amounts, some of which bankers said was by Americans, to-day forced the United States dollar to new low levels.

The dollar closed at 16.27 francs, after opening at 16.65 francs (6.15 and 6.00 cents to the franc, respectively). Yesterday's closing rate was 16.67 francs.

Sterling touched 79.00 francs.

Dorothy Dix

Believes Human Attitude More Effective

Can You Still Remember How You Felt at Seventeen?—If You Insist That You Were a Plaster Saint in Your Youth, How Can You Expect Your Children to Confess Their Temptations to You?

I WONDER what it is about parenthood that deprives people of their memories, their sense of humor and their common sense, and that turns them into liars?

Not always, of course. There are some fathers and mothers who are not mentally upset by having children, who remain able to get a just perspective on their offspring and see them as human beings and not as embryonic angels or potential devils and who are still able to recall the fact that they were once young themselves and had the desires and emotions that belonged to that period of life. Also, they do not pose as plaster saints, and frankly admit that in their time they have made mistakes and done the things they should not have done and left those things they should have done undone.

But for the most part parents seem to be afflicted with an amnesia that wipes out completely every memory of their past lives, or at least this is the attitude they assume toward their children. Father can't recall a single instance in which he was even tempted to go on a wild party.

He never played hookey from school or flunked in examinations. He was never silly about a girl. He never wanted a high-stepping horse and a red-wheeled buggy like the other boys had. He never rebelled at parental authority or thought about running away from home.

On the contrary, he was always studious and industrious, and serious-minded, and never dreamed of such a thing as defying his dear parents.

Mother can't remember when she was sixteen and boy-crazy, and when she thought she would die if she couldn't do what all the other girls were doing and have a new party frock. Nor has mother the faintest recollection of how she used to make errands to the drug store because a boy at the soda counter had perfectly wonderful eyes and wavy hair; nor how she used to tell Mother fibs about going to spend the night with Susie when she and Susie were going with boys of whom their parents did not approve to a dance of which their parents never heard.

On the contrary, according to Mother, she was one daughter of Eve who had no taste for forbidden fruit. She was always Mother's little helper, content with plain, practical, sensible clothes, and she asked no liveller amusement than spending her evenings in the family circle reading an improving book. And she never, never even thought of boys.

Curiously enough, parents actually come to believe that they were these paragons of virtue that they represent themselves to have been in their youth, and this is why they have no sympathy with their adolescent children and no understanding of them and why they are so unable to guide them and save the stumbling little feet from blundering into the pits into which so many boys and girls fall.

In the first place, this loss of memory [illegible] parents and children. For how can a boy tell a father who has never had a wayward impulse in his life of the temptations by which he is beset? How can he tell a father who has never done an unwise thing in his life about what a fool he has been and the mess he has got himself into?

How can a girl tell a mother who was always Miss Prunes and Prism when she was young about how thrilled she was when some boy kissed her or about going to a party and drinking cocktails and getting a little lit up or that she is flirting with some married man because she gets a kick out of it on account of its danger?

The answer is: They can't. It is only to fellow sinners that we can open our hearts and confess our follies.

So the parents don't know what their children are dong because they have made it impossible for the youngsters to talk freely to them. Naturally enough girls and boys are not going to tell Father and Mother the things that will bring down upon them a parental lecture or prevent them from carrying out some plan they have in mind.

Youth is avid for pleasure. It will have enjoyment at any cost, and if you don't want your children to pay too high a price for it you must help them to all the harmless gayety possible, not deny them every amusement. And that's something that fathers and mothers should recall out of their experiences with their own fathers and mothers, but they don't.

Parents' failure to remember their own youth also causes them much unnecessary trouble and worry. They take a tragic view of so many things that they would laugh off if they would only recall that they themselves went through these same experiences and did the same idotic things and came through them unscathed.

And all of these catastrophies could have been avoided if only fathers and mothers remembered how they felt about things when they were young.

The Earth's Large Cities

TOKIO

If we may believe figures which came out of Japan last year, Tokio now ranks third in size among the cities of the world.

Young Women Looking at Theatre Posters in Tokio

It is strange that Tokio should "jump" from a population rated at 2,000,000 in 1925 to 5,312,000 in 1932; but that is what Japanese officials have asserted. They explain that the limits of the city have been extended to include millions of persons who were outside the old limits.

No doubt the Japanese are proud to think that so many people can be counted in their largest city; but to my mind there is more reason for sadness than joy when a city grows to extreme size. When people are crowded together by the millions, they lose touch with much that is beautiful and wholesome in life. For them the stars do not shine so brightly, and the woods are too hard to reach.

Public parks help those who live in large cities; and Tokio is blessed with many of them.

The Tokio-Yokohama earthquake of 1923 was one of the terrible disasters of history. Tokio was almost shaken to pieces. The 'quake and the fire which followed it destroyed about half of all the buildings in the city. At least 60,000 persons lost their lives.

A fine spirit was shown by the people after the event. They set about building a new and greater Tokio.

Tokio does not boast any "skyscrapers," but contains office buildings of seven and eight stories. Most of the homes are of one or two stories. Commonly they are composed of wood, but some have metal roofs which are fitted to resist fire. We might say that the people of Japan are "sitting on the edge of a volcano." The islands rose from the sea long ago, when volcanoes sent lava and ashes up out of the water. Not all of those volcanoes have become extinct. Small earthquakes are recorded almost daily, and serious 'quakes come once in about seven years.

In Tokio streets the visitor sees a strange mixture of vehicles. There are high-powered autos, and there are ox-carts. There are rickshas and busses. Many citizens ride on bicycles.

Some Japanese wear clothing like ours; but many persons in Tokio, men as well as women, wear kimonos. Wooden clogs take the place of leather shoes, and raise a clattering noise as people walk along the pavement.

"ROYAL SCOT" HEADS VISIT

Officials Expected in Montreal Saturday to Accompany Famous Train West

Montreal, Sept. 20.—The "Royal Scot," famous British train on exhibition in Chicago, which was the centre of interest in Montreal when it arrived last spring in the fast freight freighter Beaverdale, will enter the limelight soon again.

A cable from England states that T. C. Byron and C. O. Anderson of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway, who had charge of the train during its tour of Canada and the United States in the spring, are due to reach here Saturday in the Canadian Pacific liner, Duchess of Bedford.

Interviewed on their departure for England two months ago, the L.M.S. officials were due to return a few weeks before the departure of the crack London-to-Glasgow flier on an exhibition tour of western United States and Canada. It is understood here that Western Canada will see the "Royal Scot" at Canadian Pacific Railway stations in Vancouver, Kamloops, Calgary, Moose Jaw, Regina and Winnipeg.

Low Freight Rates Named

Washington, Sept. 20.—Steamship companies operating through the Panama Canal yesterday won an initial contest with transcontinental carriers, when the Interstate Commerce Commission refused to suspend the first joint water-rail rate ever proposed between Pacific Ports and the Mississippi Valley.

As a result, a freight rate of 76 cents per 100 pounds on canned goods became effective at midnight. It is the lowest charge ever imposed on canned goods between the Pacific Coast and Mississippi Valley, through the Panama Canal.

Transcontinental Lines filed a protest with the Commission and gave notice that effective October 1, their rate on canned goods would be reduced from 90 cents a hundred pounds to 80 cents.

SHIPS BROUGHT MANY TOURISTS

Fewer Cars in This Year, But Many Tourists Come By Steamers From California

Chicago Fair Drew People East, Who Would Otherwise Have Come to Victoria

In spite of a slight fall in the actual figures, and the fact that the fishing was not quite as good as last year, Vancouver Island's tourist industry, has been satisfactory this year, according to a report issued this morning by the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau.

There were as many motor cars in this year but more tourists visited Victoria aboard steamers touching at this port on their way to and from California.

The four liners of the Grace fleet, here twice in two weeks, have been bringing more than 200 passengers each call. Three ships of the Pacific Steamship Lines also brought capacity lists of passengers, the Ss. H. F. Alexander having had more than 500 persons each Tuesday evening. While their ships are in port the passengers disembark and take a drives up-town to inspect the shops and other places of interest.

FIGURES IN

"Results of automobile travel in and out of the port of Victoria, including Sidney, for the summer, have now been received by the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau. Travel figures to and from the island via Nanaimo, which is now one of the main auto ports, are not yet to hand, but it is understood they compare favorably, with those of 1932.

MORE IN STORES

"During the past summer 8,892 cars were handled through Victoria and Sidney, bringing 24,298 passengers. These figures show a small drop from those of 1932—504 fewer cars and 2,277 fewer passengers. Judging, however, from reports received to date, Victoria has had a better tourist season than has been experienced by a large number of her rivals on the mainland.

The prevailing financial stringency has had its effects on tourist purchases. Merchants who cater to the wants of visitors state that more visited their stores than in 1932, but with few exceptions the demand was for small articles, and prices were the deciding factor. Victoria and up-island hotels which have reduced tariffs, to be in keeping with the present-day conditions, have enjoyed a good to fair season. The good reputation that these hostelries have built up in the past has stood them in good stead. Many of their guests this year are people who visited them in past seasons.

"Outside Victoria, the island resorts, considering the reduced travel when compared with the bumper years of 1928 and 1929, have done very well. Some have had their full capacity of guests during practically the whole of July and August, while fishing, driving and horseback riding again proved their great value as attractions.

MANY FROM PRAIRIES

"It is the recognition of Victoria and Vancouver Island as ideal natural holiday playgrounds that has proved the main magnet in attracting visitors. Due to the reduced tourists' rates on the Canadian railways, there was an increase in the number of visitors to Victoria from the Prairies during the summer, while California cars headed the procession from the United States.

"General travel is heavy from California, due to the increased transportation facilities. In fact Victoria is rapidly becoming recognized as the most popular summer playground for the people in northern and southern California. It is only the Chicago Fair, and its enormous popularity as a tourist attraction that has prevented this from being a really excellent year in this respect."

OLD SALTS HOLD PARTY

Lord Runciman Entertains Master Mariners at Old-fashioned Shipboard Affair

Southampton, Sept. 20.—Lord Runciman, eighty-six-year-old shipowner, father of Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, entertained eighthteen of his fellow-members of the Southampton Master Mariners' Club at a party on the Solent last month on board his yacht, Sunbeam II, a three-masted schooner.

The master mariners became sailors once again and toiled in the sun all day as if there were no such thing as age.

Lord Runciman, "Britain's premier sea-dog," as he is called, had his guests hauling at the halyards and straining at the winches till their hands were blistered. They hauled no less than 16,000 square feet of sail to the breeze. Famous commanders who had retired from the sea heaved till the perspiration poured from them and roared lustily the choruses of sea chanties which Lord Runciman sang.

The greatest feat of the day was that of Captain Sir Benjamin Chave, aged sixty-three, a famous commander of the Union Castle Line, who, with others, climbed ninety feet up into the rigging to set a sail. The party had "windjammer fare" for lunch—sea pie made from salt pork, salt beef and vegetables.

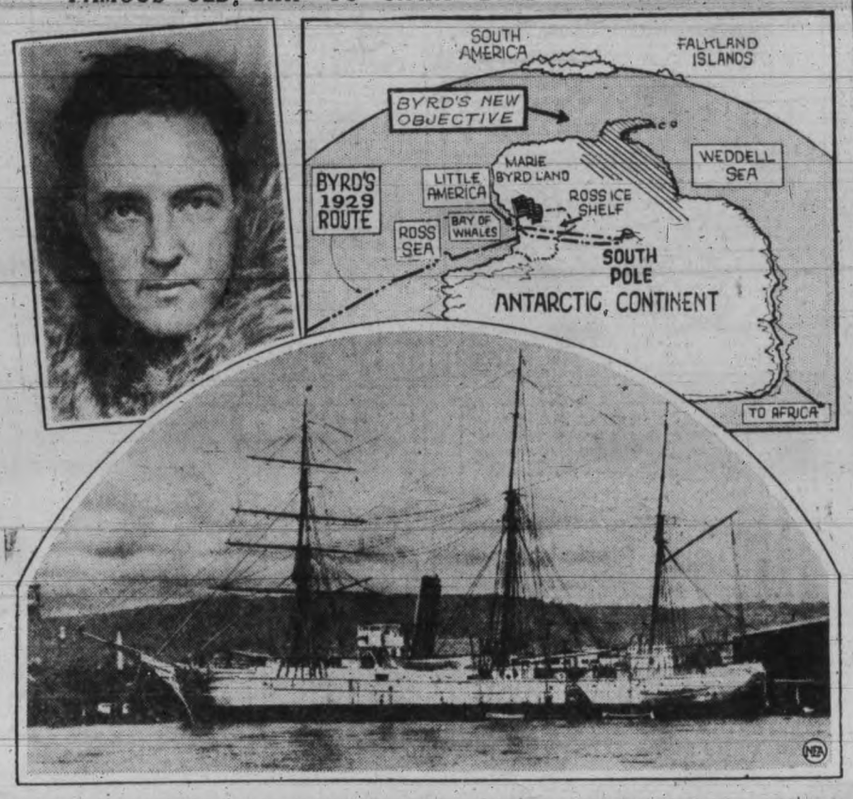
FAMOUS OLD SHIP TO CARRY BYRD TO ANTARCTIC



Admiral Richard E. Byrd, above, hopes to discover and claim for the United States vast areas of unexplored land lying between South America and the South Pole on a second expedition he will lead to the Antarctic this fall. The approximate location of land Byrd hopes to find and the route of his 1929 expedition are shown on the map. One of the expedition's two vessels will be the old U.S. coastguard cutter Bear, pictured here, famous for its rescue work in Arctic waters.

Capt. Keene, Here In 1859, Is Dead

Came to Esquimalt Harbor From England Aboard H.B.C. Vessel Labouchere

Served United States Government For Many Years Aboard Revenue Cutters

Capt. James W. Keene, who arrived in Victoria three-quarters of a century ago aboard the Hudson Bay Company's barque-rigged steamer Labouchere, and was well-known in shipping circles here in the early days, died at his home in Seattle on Monday, according to word received in Victoria this morning. He was ninety-one years of age.

It was late in the spring of 1859, when the first settlers in the Crown Colony of Vancouver Island, were flocking to Victoria, that the Labouchere steamed up the Strait and dropped anchor in Esquimalt Harbor, after her long voyage from England. The late Capt. Keene, then a boy of sixteen, was aboard, serving before the mast, and starting a career that was to be intimately bound up with the sea for many years. He was born in England.

The Labouchere was one of the most important additions to Victoria's steam fleet since the arrival of the Otter some years before. The Labouchere was built at Green's, Blackwall, London, in 1858, and left for her long trip to the Northwest in the fall of that year, the voyage taking a little more than six months. She was a side-wheeled steamer of 680 tons, and was 202 feet in length, with a twenty-eight foot beam, and a depth of fifteen feet. She was fitted with oscillating engines of 180 horsepower. Capt. Trivette, who afterwards brought out the steamer Princess Royal to Victoria, was in command of the Labouchere on her maiden voyage.

WENT TO CARIBOO

The late Capt. Keene remained with the Labouchere until 1863, when he went to the Cariboo. A short time later he bought an interest in the sloop Red Rover and commenced trading along the Coast. He continued in this business, with various sloops, carrying passengers between Victoria, Port Townsend and other points on Puget Sound, and occasionally piloting vessels to the mill ports. In the spring of 1868 he took the schooner Pioneer to the Pribloff Islands on a sealing voyage.

He was next master of the schooner Northwester, running to Alaska, leaving her pilot the United States steamer Saginaw, and from 1869 to 1879 was in the employ of the United States Government, five years of that period having been spent on the revenue cutter Lincoln. In the fall resumed his old vocation, taking the tubgoat Mary Taylor, from Puget Sound to Astoria.

SETTLED DISPUTE

The following year he outfitted the steamer Favorite for the Northwest Trading Company, and ran her for several months. He afterwards served as master, or pilot, on the steamers Evangel, of which he superintended the building, Eliza Anderson, Henry Bailey, Leo, a steam schooner which he took to Alaska, and several others. Between 1889, and 1915, when he retired, by a special act of the United States Congress, he made frequent trips to Alaska for the government. He was given much of the credit for the amicable settlement of the dispute between Great Britain and the United States over the boundary between Alaska and the Yukon.

Surviving the captain at the Seattle home are the widow, two daughters, Mrs. A. E. LeBallister and Mrs. John M. Spargur, and one son, Crosby E. Keen. The family residence in Seattle is at 4617 W. Englewood Street.

Halifax Docks Still Smoulder

Flames Leaping Fitfully To-day, After Causing Damage Estimated at $1,000,000.

Halifax, Sept. 20.—Weary-eyed Halifax firemen stood guard to-day over a long heap of smouldering debris that stretched from the city's waterfront. Flames still leaped fitfully from the wreckage of old Pier Two, but they were dying down to-day after raging unchecked through $1,000,000 in buildings and merchandise.

For more than thirty hours, firemen pitted futile efforts against the flames. Streams of water were directed into the huge shed since the fire's mysterious outbreak early yesterday morning, when it flared through the 688-foot building and its valuable contents.

Alex Hoare, a fireman, was injured when he fell from a loading platform in the upper floor. Two others were overcome by smoke.

LOAD LUMBER, FISH TO-DAY

Ss. Winnipeg Taking 300 Boxes From Cold Storage Plant For France

Ss. Aldington Court in For Lumber; Golden Cloud and Dinteldyke Due in Morning

Loading 500,000 feet of lumber today at Ogden Point is the British freighter Aldington Court, Capt. A. Camp, which docked from Vancouver yesterday evening at 10.15 o'clock. She hopes to get away this evening for Port Alberni to complete for London.

The Aldington Court is registered at 4,891 tons, with a length of 465 feet, a beam of fifty-five feet and a depth of twenty-five feet. She was built at the plant of W. Pickersgill and Sons at Sunderland in 1929. Her home port is London.

When she sails from Victoria late this afternoon for Vancouver, the French liner Winnipeg will be laden with 1,200,000 feet of lumber and 300 boxes of frozen salmon, loaded at Victoria since early Monday morning. The salmon was put aboard this morning from the Victoria Cold Storage Plant, and is destined to France. The bulk of the fish cargo, however, will be loaded at Vancouver.

Fifty tourist passengers from California who arrived here aboard the Winnipeg and left Monday morning for trips up-island, returned this morning to see something of Victoria before sailing this afternoon en route to their homes in the south. They reported a most enjoyable time on the island, despite disappointing weather.

The following lumber ships are due to arrive here to load lumber: Ss. Fernbrook, Ss. Chemainus, Ss. Dinteldyk, Ss. Golden Cloud, Ss. Aldington Court, Ss. Winnipeg, Ss. Aorangi, Ss. Pacific Trader, Ss. Protesilaus, Ss. Modavia, Ss. Cortono, Ss. Pacific Shipper, Ss. Santa Rosa, Ss. Santa Lucia, Ss. Tyndareus, Ss. Heian Maru, Ss. Hiye Maru, Ss. Pacific Pioneer, Ss. President Cleveland, Ss. President Grant, Ss. Empress of Russia, Ss. Empress of Japan, Ss. President Jefferson, Ss. President Jackson, Ss. Protesilaus, Ss. Emma Alexander, Ss. Santa Elena, Ss. Empress of Canada, Ss. Duchess of York.

Of the above ships due to come to Victoria for lumber, report the Ss. Golden Cloud due at Ogden Point in the morning to load for Australia. She is coming here from Chemainus. Saturday morning the Ss. Fernbrook is expected to load lumber for Shanghai.

A parcel of 30,000 feet of lumber will be put aboard the Dutch ship Dinteldyk to-morrow morning at Ogden Point. The Dinteldyk is due here from Rotterdam and London, and will load lumber and fish here before proceeding to Vancouver.

TELLS STORY OF VOYAGE

Harry Kent of Vancouver to Appear Before Rotary Clubs; Mediterranean Sea Topic

Because he enjoyed the journey so thoroughly himself and because the movie record he made of his wanderings has been seen and enjoyed by thousands of people in the Greater Vancouver area, Harry E. Kent, well-known Vancouver business man, and past secretary of the Rotary Club of Vancouver, is devoting a vacation trip through the interior of British Columbia and Alberta to the sharing of the experiences he gained during a tour of the Mediterranean. His itinerary has been arranged by the Rotary Club of Vancouver as part of that club's policy of bringing to Rotary clubs of British Columbia interior towns interesting personalities and speakers.

Mr. Kent, with Mrs. Kent, accompanied the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Australia on her Mediterranean cruise during the winter of 1932. Taking along a movie camera he made a celluloid record of his trip, which experts pronounce as a kaleidoscopic adventure throughout some of the world's most ancient and storied civilizations.

"I always tell each audience," Mr. Kent explains, "that I am no millionaire, that our Mediterranean cruise was the result of a savings campaign which we called our travel fund. Our tour was the realization of a dream we fostered for years, bringing it to fulfilment only through considerable self-denial. In this we did no more than others in similar circumstances can do."

Two days after he returned he was telling the Vancouver Board of Trade of the countries he had seen. Requests poured in on him for a repetition of his address. Shortly afterwards he carefully arranged and edited his films so that he could illustrate his talks.

Mr. Kent shows pictures of Ajaccio, where Napoleon was born; of Tunis, once the home of Barbery pirates of famous Carthage. Camel rides to the Pyramids, Messina, Pompeii, Rome and the Colosseum, Florence and Venice, Dubrovnik in Jugoslavia, Instabul, Smyrna, the Island of Cyprus, the old castles in Rhodes, where the knights halted the rush of the Mussulmen about to overwhelm Europe, the pretty town of Nazareth, Damascus and Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives.

And now other parts of the province are to hear him. His itinerary takes him to Kamloops, Revelstoke, Calgary, Edmonton, Fernie, MacLeod, Cranbrook, Nelson, Trail, Penticton, Kelowna and Vernon.

English Railway Companies Set Record For Handling of Baggage

Canadian Press

London, Sept. 20.—The four main line railway companies of the United Kingdom established a record during August in the carriage of baggage, more of it having been handled in that holiday month than in any previous August in the past twenty years.

Porters at the London termini wrestled with mountains of trunks, suitcases, sports equipment, and seaside buckets and spades. The reason was that the public were at last appreciating the "luggage in advance" facilities offered by the railway companies, by which it was possible to send 100 pounds of baggage for two shillings from home to destination without further worry or tipping.

Returning passengers also availed themselves of the new facility of leaving their baggage at the London termini for delivery at their doorsteps the following morning for the payment of one shilling.
